

The Charlottetown Herald.

NEW SERIES.

CHARLOTTETOWN, PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1904

Vol. XXXIII, No. 24

New Wall Paper

WE HAVE JUST OPENED UP OUR

New Wall Paper for 1904

The patterns and colorings are away ahead of anything ever seen here before.

Don't buy before seeing our line.

TAYLOR'S

Book and Wall Paper Store.

HARDWARE!

Largest Assortment,
Lowest Prices.
WHOLESALE and RETAIL

Fennell & Chandler.

ROBERT PALMER & CO.,

Charlottetown Sash and Door Factory,

Manufacturers of Doors & Frames, Sashes & Frames
Interior and Exterior finish etc., etc.,

Our Specialties

Gothic windows, stairs, stair rails, Balusters, Newel Posts, Cypress Gutter and Conductors, Kiln dried Spruce and Hardwood Flooring, Kiln dried clear spruce, sheathing and clapboards, Encourage home Industry.

ROBERT PALMER & CO.,

PEAKE'S No. 3 WHARF.

CHARLOTTETOWN.

If You Buy

Lawn Mowers, Garden
Tools and Hoes, Poultry
Netting, Screen Wire,
Screen Doors and Hinges.

We Can Supply Your Wants.

SIMON W. CRABBE.

Stoves and Hardware - Walker's Corner

YES!

We're Paying

HIGHEST PRICES for WOOL

In exchange for Clothing, Flannels,
Tweeds, Stockinette,
Homespuns, Yarns,
Raincoats and Peajackets.

We must have

50,000 LBS.

GOOD WASHED WOOL AT ONCE.

It's needed in our factory at Moncton, and we're bound to get it, if paying the highest price counts.

THE HUMPHREY CLOTHING STORE,

Opera House Building.

A. WINFIELD SCOTT, Manager. Phone 63

For Your Baby You Need a Carriage.

We have received our first shipment of

New Carriages & Go Carts.

You will find it easy to choose one that will please you from this assortment, as we have some of the finest designs ever shown here. Call in and see them anyway.

JOHN NEWSON.

Seeds. Seeds.

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED

A Large Consignment of

SEEDS

From Messrs. Steele Briggs' Co., of Toronto.

These goods will give entire satisfaction. If you deal with us we will not allow you to be dissatisfied. To trade with us is a pleasure. Once a customer always a customer.

John McKenna.

Phone 226, Cor Queen and Dorchester Sts.

Cantankerous Obstinate Watches.

If you are the owner of a cantankerous, obstinate Watch, that utterly refuses to behave itself decently and tell time correctly, why not bring it to the

E. W. Taylor Store

and let our expert repairers diagnose its case? An erratic unreliable Watch is little better than no Watch at all. The longer you allow it to misbehave the more difficult the repairer's task will be in the end and the greater the cost of repair. Putting off the fixing of a Watch or Clock that has gotten out of order is a losing and shortsighted policy. Has this any home application to any of your timepieces? If so our Repair Department is ready and waiting.

E. W. TAYLOR,

Cameron Block.

Dr. Wood's

Norway Pine Syrup

Cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Gout, Asthma, Pain or Tightness in the Chest, Etc.

It stops that tickling in the throat, so pleasant to take and soothing and healing to the lungs. Mr. E. Bishop Brand, the well-known golf gardener, writes:—I had a very severe attack of sore throat and tightness in the chest. Some times when I wanted to cough and could not I would almost choke to death. My wife got me a bottle of Dr. Wood's NORWAY PINE SYRUP, and to my surprise I found speedy relief. I would not be without it if it cost $100 a bottle, and I can recommend it to everyone bothered with a cough or cold.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE BOY'S CLOTHES.

Mom always makes me mad clean through

The way she buys my clothing, She always picks out things fur you That fills yer soul with loathing.

It's happened time an' time again When I want something sporty She sets her mind on somethin' plain, "Real cheap at seven-fry."

I try a suit that fits me right— A fit there ain't no doubt of— An' blamed if she don't say: "Too tight!

Too easy to grow out of." She sez I'm just "a little brute."

An' "I've her to distraction," But she ain't never brought a suit That's gave me satisfaction.

I may be bad, but, Jiminee! I ain't a-go' to bear it. I guess I know the suit fur me, Since I'm the one to wear it. I kicked so hard to-day, O my! I tell you I don't wonder

She went right home an' told Pop I Wez "gittin' quite beyond her."

Then Pop he sez a word, se he, That filled my soul with laugh-ter.

He sez he's goin' along o' me To buy my clo'es hereafter!

T. A. D.

Hazard's Yellow Oil can be applied externally for rheumatism, stiff joints, chapped hands, chilblains, sprains, etc. It can be taken internally for croup, croupy, bronchitis, pains in the stomach, kidney complaint, etc. Price 25c.

One day a fussy creature met the famous Father Healy of Dublin by the seashore, and thus accosted him: "Father Healy, I'm undergoing a cure, and I take a tumbler of seawater three times a day. Now I've had full allowance today; but do you think I might have one, just one tumbler more?"

Father Healy put his head on one side and looked at the ocean, lost in thought. "Well," he said at last with a gravelly judicial air, "I don't think it would be missed."

Minard's Liniment cures Diphtheria.

The giddy young graduate putheth on fine raiment and seeketh for a job and is employed by an impecunious young lawyer at four dollars per week, but the experienced stenographer getteth herself up like a trump, and seeketh a paying position with a business man of family. For it is a wise type-wrist who seeketh not to outshine the wife of her boss.

If a child eats ravenously, grips the teeth at night and picks its nose, you may almost be certain it has worms and should administer without delay Dr. Lee's Pleasant Worm Syrup. This remedy contains its own cathartic.

A thing I can never hope to understand is the real formality with which two women in glad garments can greet each other at a reception, when they have just held a back yard morning conference over their respective washings and called each other by their given names.

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Items of Interest.

The "Limerick Leader" says: After the month's mind for the late Dr. MacRedmond, Bishop of Killaloe, May 20, the selection of a successor to the See took place at the Cathedral, Ennis. Dr. Fogarty, vice president of Maynooth College, got 23 votes; Dr. Kelly, 17, and Dean White, 6. Dr. Fogarty was accordingly declared elected, subject to the sanction of his Holiness the Pope.

Let us endeavor, all through this month of June, the month of the Sacred Heart, to make one visit daily to the Blessed Sacrament in church, or at least to turn our thoughts and prayers to the nearest altar where, for the love of our Blessed Saviour dwells beneath the sacramental veils.—Sacred Heart Review.

"There seems to be good reason to be apprehensive as to the 'yellow peril' that threatens us in the pagan east," says the Pittsburg Observer. "But we have, unfortunately, a 'yellow peril' in our midst already—yellow journalism—and we have grown almost indifferent to the havoc which it is causing, especially to our youth."

The attitude of Russia toward the Catholic Church and Catholic people is being discussed rather widely at present. The Catholic Advance of Wichita, Kansas, believes Russia is kindly disposed toward Catholics, and it adds: "By the way, the best Catholic, the truest Catholic, the best-instructed Catholic in the State of Kansas, are immigrants from Russia, and, judging from their wonderful strength of body, they evidently had enough to eat and not much to worry them."

The Review of St. Louis finds fault with the new-fangled memorial exercises, the idea of which here and there a Catholic society borrows from secular organizations like the Elks. "For ourselves, old fogies as we are," says our St. Louis contemporary, "we prefer the practice of 'old-fashioned' Catholic societies who cause the holy sacrifice of the Mass to be offered up for their departed members and attend this most sublime and Catholic function in a body."

A letter from Bishop Hanlon, of Uganda, in equatorial Africa, tells of great havoc wrought by storms. On the night of Easter Sunday the church which served as the pro-cathedral at Nambya was blown down and the five thousand Catholics of the mission were left without a place of worship. For the present the Bishop's one-storied adobe house and improvised sheds are used to enable the Christians and catechumens to attend service and receive instructions.

In a letter to his clergy Archbishop Walsh, of Dublin, says: "The points upon which I have thought it advisable to obtain the decision of the Holy See before giving general effect in this diocese to the recently issued canonical regulations regarding sacred music are still under consideration by the Sacred Congregation of Rites. It becomes necessary, then, to extend for a further period the permission already granted for the continuance of the existing arrangements for the choirs of the churches throughout the diocese. The permission is hereby extended to the end of June."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention, and if a priest endeavors to influence them so as to make them vote in a particular way, and above all, if he has the imprudence, after the elections are over, to jar them with having voted wrongly, a most inevitable awakens animosities and compromises his functions. Let the clergy by all means exercise their rights as citizens, but if they were to throw themselves into electoral campaigns, they would soon lose the sympathy and respect which they must command in order to adequately fulfill their spiritual mission. This does not apply merely to the Italian clergy, but to the clergy of all countries where universal suffrage obtains."

Mgr. Lacroix, Bishop of Tarentaise, who was received into audience by Pius XI a few days ago, has addressed to his clergy a letter containing a report of his interview with the Pope. The most important part of this letter deals with the duties of the clergy in connection with political and electoral matters. Mgr. Lacroix gives the Pope's words as follows: "When I was Bishop of Mantua and later, Patriarch of Venice, I found that most of the difficulties and quarrels which arose between the clergy and the population had their origin in some electoral agitations. In these matters the faithful are inclined to resent priestly intervention