Replies To Bacchus Minor.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I notice a letter signed Bacchus Minor in your issue of the 7th inst., and according to his version he is afraid that Prohibition will pass (as for sure it will) and then his drinks will be stopped; surely a man writing as he does cannot be a married man with any boys growing up, if so you would think that he would be only too anxious to have the temptation removed for their welfare. I notice he says in a part of his letter, while some of our most gifted men of genius, word and deed have indulged in the flowing bowl. Yes? he is about right but how many of them have been bowled out, and to-day are not even counted as respectable citizens but are classed as the poor unfortunates. In another place he says: and to condemn a whole nation and stigmatize them with inability to manage their own affairs is ridiculous. I fail to see how the whole nation will be condemned, as it really means the stronger man helping the weaker. As regards the intelligence of the Turk, I fail to see what it has to do with this liquor question of ours. He also says: nay, he is worse, for by his vote he helps to deprive his fellow-men of their liberty. I consider that by his vote the voter voting against Rum is using his liberty to an excellent advantage, as by doing so we will have less in the Penitentiary, Lunatic Asylum and the Poor House. Again, he says, absolute Prohibition can only be attained by the combined votes of fanatical sentimentalists and kitten-hearted men. I fail to see how he can class the temperance people like that, as they are only trying to help those who cannot help themselves. He also says: but little honour to him who through his vote puts a halter around his own neck with no other result than part remorse after he has voted, and part fendish joy that he has helped dragging to his own level men of loftier ideas than he ever possessed himself. How will those people be putting a halter around their necks when they believe that by doing so the people and the country will benefit by it. And as regards dragging to his own level men of loftier ideas than he ever possessed, does he mean to say that a man who votes for Rum to stay is loftier than the man who votes to do away with it? If he does he is off his base and we will count him out. I would like to ask Bacchus Minor one question: What did Russia and France cut out the drink for?

I remain,

The Ladies' Meeting

TO AID THE ADULT BLIND.

At the meeting last week in Grenfell Hall Mrs. M. G. Winter occupied the chair and outlined the purpose for which the meeting was convened, viz., the arousing of practical sympathy in the welfare of those deprived of sight and the devising of ways and means of assisting the adult blind through the extension movement in connection with the Halifax School for the Blind.

Lady Davidson then addressed the meeting. She told of her daily contact for some years with one near and dear who unhappily was deprived of sight. With what pleasure they read and conversed together and the cheery optimism of the dear one was not without the leaving of impressions of inspiration and hope.

Continuing, Lady Davidson said: "I am familiar with the means used in the education of the Blind and view with admiration and thankfulness the educational achievements of many of this class. When in London, previous to my leaving for the colonies, it was my privilege and pleasure to assist the National Institute for the Blind in its great philanthropic and humanitarian work." Lady Davidson reads and writes Braille, which is the system by which blind persons study, she having acquired this knowledge in order to make her assistance really practical. In referring to the adult blind of the Colony 140, young men and women, she evinced a sincere desire that something be done to alleviate their present condition, and said: "Were we to learn as did the heroine in Florence Barclay's book: 'The Rosary,' what this deprivation meant we might appreciate more fully the inestimable blessing of sight."

Although the titanic European struggle was demanding the best in us all, and so much had and was still to be done, yet in her opinion home responsibilities and duties must not be neglected. Her Ladyship's pleasing words were full of hope and encouragement and the keynote of practical sympathy was sounded by her very clearly throughout. She felt that the Women's Patriotic Association might well take up this most important work, and should the Executive of that noble band of workers so decide the blind of the colony must no longer sit in their dark corner in abject misery, helplessness and in some cases despondency.

The chairman then introduced Mr. John Weir, travelling secretary of the School for the Blind, who is here in the interests of the blind of the colony. Mr. Weir whose subject was the Education of the Blind, dealt with it from two points of view. First the institutional training and equipping of the youthful blind, and second, the home teaching of the adult blind. He would ask that specific interest be manifested in this latter class numbering as they do 140 young men and women of the colony. For 16 of the former class the Government of Newfoundland makes annual provision at the Halifax School at a cost to the Colony of $4,000. He felt confident that the State would not fail to realize its responsibility toward the remaining 24 of the youthful blind of the country, reasoning that money so invested as in the education of the blind, that they become useful men and women, producers rather than consumers, is money well spent and in the best interests of the country. Mr. Weir said that the early philanthropists who addressed their attention to the help of the Blind were moved by the spirit of compassion and aimed at rearing the blind under sheltered and protected conditions. Good as were their intentions the result was not satisfactory but in the year 1870 a new spirit involving a new method arose. He claimed that while this new method had not restricted the flow of compassion it had allowed enterprising blind youths to enter into open competition with their seeing brethren. This was a great point gained. He stated, too, that the utmost freedom in the choice of profession or vocation should be allowed to the Blind under reasonable limitations. He graphically outlined the work of the Halifax School in its several departments and passed a well deserved eulogium on Sir Charles Frederick Fraser, Superintendent of the School, whose life has been devoted to the service of the blind and of whom it might truly be said: "If you seek his monument look around you." Mr. Weir showed clearly that blindness is not an insuperable obstacle to success that is when the person so handicapped is educated and equipped to face the battle of life.

In dealing with the second part of his subject, the Home Teaching of the Blind, he said it was little to be wondered at, that these men suddenly plunged as it were into a new world in which their whole previous training unfitted them to dwell, take a hopeless view of life. He felt that the people of Newfoundland as a class were perfectly unaware of the true condition, the abject misery and helplessness of the 140 adult blind in their midst, and added: Now that this representative gathering knows the extent and importance of the work to be done through the extension movement of the Halifax School I feel assured of the ready and hearty co-operation of all." The extension movement needs some $30,000 as a maintenance fund that will make the home teaching of the adult blind of the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland. Organized and concerted action are needed that this amount be forthcoming and the work begun without delay. An auxiliary society to the extension movement was, in his opinion, the way by which Newfoundland might do its part in the raising of this amount, thus helping others to help themselves. What more noble purpose could be ours?

The Secretary, Mrs. Duley, said: "It is no less lamentable than true that speaking generally thanksgiving plays a pitifully small part in our daily devotions. We become so accustomed to the many benefits that we enjoy that the thought of recognizing and thanking for them specifically seems to occur to us but seldom. Hence eyesight and a thousand things are accepted by those who have them as a matter of course and not until one or the other of them is lost do we realize the great value of what we prize so lightly."

Lady Horwood moves that this meeting be constituted the Newfoundland Auxiliary Society for the home teaching of the blind throughout the extension movement in connection with the Halifax School for the Blind, and that it be affiliated with the Newfoundland W. P. A. should the executive of that body at its meeting to be held on Monday next decide that such affiliation be advisable.

Mrs. John Browning seconded the motion endorsing all that the previous speakers had said.

The motion was unanimously carried and those present enrolled as members.

This movement must have the hearty approval and support of the whole country and we bespeak for the society's plan of raising funds to carry on this philanthropic and humanitarian work such financial assistance as should be the outcome of their proposed appeal.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Allow me space in your paper to make a few remarks concerning the two young men of this small community, who have given themselves to their country. They are Heber, the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Kearley, and Rowland, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gosse. We congratulate their parents on their noble sons. We also extend our sympathy to Mrs. Kearley, who has been an invalid for the past two years, so we know the suspense is the greater. The members of Belmont Lodge, L.O. A., of whom Private Kearley is a member, formed up at her home and paraded to the station, where, there was a number of people. After the singing of the National Anthem, he was presented with a farewell address. We have to thank Conductor Lee, who kindly held the train, as the train pulled out the men were given many cheers.

Amusements.

PRIVATE DENIS HOGAN.

Will be seen in his martial and heroic role at the British Theatre tonight in the finest and most perfect single reel military drama ever taken. His counterpart is to be found to-day in the glorious representatives of the Great Empire who are giving Emperor William such a splendid lesson in the art of "Turkey Trotting." This beautiful production makes one's blood thrill at the magnificent display of manhood as portrayed by Private Denis Hogan. The balance of the bill is exceptionally good, consisting of a beautiful two reel society drama entitled, "Gwendolyn," a western comedy, "Snakeville's Most Popular Lady," A Kaleid play, "The Nurse and the Counterfeiters," Arthur Priestman Cameron, the man from Yorkshire, and Miss Keeping, the popular pianist. A programme of the highest merit throughout.

At Rossley's the popular vaudeville and theatrical house, this week will eclipse anything ever seen before and patrons will see the best entertainment ever presented, for there is a potted pantomime of Little Bo Peep and Boy Blue that for originality has never been equalled. Bonnie Rossley, as Bo Peep, in new and correct costume will look charming. Madge Locke, the talented actress-vocalist and dancer, will appear as Boy Blue, a dashing, bold and saucy princeps as ever made love to a girl. Mr. Ballard Brown will appear as Baron Grumble, a villain of the deepest dye, but only in the show, for we all know him to be a real good fellow. Mr. F. Decikin, as Bo Peep's Mother, a Dane, who takes no pleasure in life. Jack Rossley, you have heard of him, as Idle Simon. He bought a watch and all the works fell out. The Sun Shine Girls, bless their little hearts, they are your own town girls, for talent a credit to St. John's and their teacher. They will delight and astound you; they make no less than seven changes of costumes in this beautiful production: Bo Peep.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END.

The popular little house has as usual a fine attractive programme arranged for the beginning of this week. All good pictures, instructive, amusing and good comedy, sure to make the most solemn person laugh. A good little string with a charming song, good music and a clean, cosy little theatre, the very place to spend an evening.

See the regular advertisement for particulars of the big Crescent Picture Palace programme for to-day. The Crescent management have decided to make the admission five cents afternoon and night; the same big programme will be given for the lesser admission fee; drop in this evening and see the big five cents worth the Crescent gives.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL AT NICKEL TO-DAY.

There will be another episode of "Our Mutual Girl" at the Nickel Theatre to-day and patrons are looking forward to it with interest. To-day's film shows Margaret meeting the girl with the Red Rose. There is also a beautiful Vitaphone drama produced with the co-operation of the American Bankers Association. It is in three reels and without doubt one of the finest pictures ever given here. There will also be a Keystone comedy. Howard Stanley farewells this week, and will be followed by Canada's great baritone, Forbes Law Duguid, who is one of the leading singers of the day. On Wednesday, the fourth episode of "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be given.

Rugby Football.

The second game of the inter-collegiate Rugby matches was played on Saturday last, the Methodists defeating the Pelidians by a score of 13 points to nil. The players were:—
