The German Reply.

Last night's press abstract of the German Reply to the American Note was such as to lead to the belief that the Reply could not be considered a satisfactory one, and we were not surprised to learn from the later despatch to-day that in official quarters the Reply was considered unsatisfactory. That impression is based mainly on the press copy of the Reply as the official text had not reached Washington at the time the impression was made. No doubt little satisfaction was expected as the American Am-bassador had been instructed to obtain a definite reply in black and white to the American note, and not to continue an intermediate and dilatory argument in Berlin on points of difference. This insistence on a definite reply by President Wilson was in itself an intimation that the interlo cutary proceedings in Berlin were not

One of the main points in the American demand was that Americans should be free from danger in travel-ling in mercantile vessels of a belligerent. President Wilson asked for an assent to this principle, and this demand was but a request for a form-al recognition in the German Reply of an accepted principle of Interna-tional Law. The assent, however, to this principle would be a plea of guilt to the charge of murdering the hundred Americans lost by the German submarine attack on the Lusitania The German Reply gives no such assurance. It specially limits the assurance given, to Americans on mer-cantile ships which do not belong to belligerent. The limitation of the assurance that they will not endange American lives on neutrals means that they will sink all the Lusitanias they can and Americans aboard mus take their chances of meeting the same fate their countrymen met of the Lusitania. It means further that they decline to give reparation to Americans and their next a kin who suf fered by the sinking of the Lusitania And even for the assurance that the And even for the assurance that they will permit Americans to cross the ocean on American ships they attempt to make a bargain. They ask the American Government to commit a breach of neutrality against the British and their allies in return for allowing Americans to live on their allies in the American for allowing Americans to live on their properties. The weak of the American for allowing Americans to live on their properties. own ships. They ask the American Government to intervene and preven owners of American passenger ships carrying contraband.

President Wilson and Ex-Secretary Bryan have already expressed their opinion that any interference by the Government to stop the manufacture and trade in munitions would be a breach of neutrality. But the German Government even goes further than the German-American in the United States and practically calls upon the American Government to stop carrying not only munitions but of all Contrabands by American wounded and missing of officers and wounded and missing of officers and stop carrying not only munitions but of all Contrabands by American passenger ships. In general, Germany after intimating she will repeat the Lusitania tragedy if she can, no matter what damages may be incurred by Americans on board, has the effrontery to call upon America to commit a breach of neutrality in aiding her actively to stop commerce in contraband, although Germany has forefront in supplying belligeren about 200 portraits of Methodist Ministers who have laboured in St. John's during the century now closing. Of course, several happened to be duplicates. In other cases I received two or three, even 5 portraits of some ministers, but as they were all of the same minister at different periods of his life, it gave us all the better chance of selecting the best likenesses of such ministers. The list is now complete, except in one case—that of es of such ministers. The list is now complete, except in one case—that of Rev. John Smithie's who after doing good service here, left for a new mission in West Australia in 1835. I fear it is now impossible to get his portrait, but if any one has a copy we should be thankful to get it.

May I further ask for a good portrait of Rev. Dr. Knight. We have one; but it is not in such good condition as the others and we hope to one; but it is not in such good condi-tion as the others and we hope to get a better one yet. I heard only a few days ago, that somebody publish-ed many years ago in a book (I be-lieve) a view of the old Wooden Me-thodist Church built in 1816 and occupied until 1857 when the first brick church took its place. Will some reader lend the Committee their copy of that picture "if they have one?" They would confer a great favour by doing so. I may add that the Souvenir Booklet intended to be published is

Major Franklin Forging Ahead.

The many friends of Major W. H Franklin will be glad to learn that the officer's services at the front are iors. On June 10th he was ordered to join the 5th Royal Warwickshire Regiment to take over the duties of Senior Major (temporary) and second in command. Colonel Stewart, the officer commanding, became invalided on June 16th, and by order of the General Officer in Command Major Franklin was given full charge of the sence. The Major has been rendering good service and gaining valuable experience at the front, and is now on active service in Flanders. He has been gazetted as Major of the New-foundland Regiment.

Timely Rescue.

Booklet intended to be published is in the hands of the publishers, and will be issued at the earliest possible date. It will contain the official record of the centenial services and be profusely illustrated with superior photo-engravings of great interest to Methodists.

All photos lent the committee will minutes, and would have drowned but for the prompt rescue effected by William Tibbs, an inmate of the Poor Asylum, who heard the lad's screams Tibbs got down on the balks and fish ed out the boy, who was in a had state driven home and attended by a d
