Why the Bar is Gone Forever.

(From the Toronto Globe.)

There can be no come-back for the barroom. So far as concerns Ontario it is gone. Gone once, it is gone forever. And the real reason is that public opinion against it, on economic grounds as well as on moral, is becoming positive and solid. From all parts of Ontario and from all sorts of people the same testimony comes. Yesterday's mail brought one letter from an outstanding officer of the law, another from an Irish washerwoman. Both now agree that prohibition can prohibit, and that to enforce the law means to end the traffic.

The legal gentleman tells his experience in these words:

"I was not keen on Prohibition, but I confess my observation converts me. For instance: a rural hotelkeeper told me he now takes in $5 a day, where formerly he took $25. Another takes $10 where formerly he took $50. They told me, too, that the farmer now stays at home and works, while the women folk do the shopping. A man is indeed blind who cannot figure up the saving in money and in time."

Not blind but thoughtless. And the thoughtlessness of thousands of citizens is being cured by Canada's war experiences. The extra $20 and $40 spent every day in the barroom went for liquor, and was worse than wasted. It was taken from the man's margin or from the family purse. The liquor it purchased made the men who drank it worse as fathers, as sons, as citizens, and as workmen. They could not do their "bit," because they could not do their best. And in their waste both their own homes and the community suffered loss.

In her letter the washerwoman says: "It is just like heaven in our home now, for my two boys never come home drunk." In her own way she told the story of the economic burden as well as the social tragedy of the barroom.

And it is because the barroom is together and everywhere a parasite that the barroom is doomed. The wine, the beer, and the whiskey are worse than wasted: they destroy the productive value of those who drink them. This is why the spokesmen for the liquor traffic talked economic nonsense. It is better for the community that men that idle themselves, their productive activity should waste the wealth and destroy the productivity of the country.

For the community it is best of all that the parasites themselves be turned into producers. This is what happened when the men who are fed and clothed by the service of others, be that service physical or mental, are made servants of the community and do their "bit." What Ontario people are now learning is that no man does his best. This is no time for the parasitic institution. The drink traffic has proved itself not a worker but a waster. Out it goes. And it can have no come-back.

Citizen's Committee on Sanitation.

The Citizens' Committee held their regular weekly meeting last night. Chairman Soper, who presided, was obliged to leave when the meeting was half through to attend to some urgent personal business. Vice-Chairman Kelly filling the office for the remainder of the evening. Considerable discussion arising out of the reading of the last minutes took place, and it was decided that the Committee recommend that Sections 104 and 161 under the heading of Sanitation be expunged. The Sections in question deals with the construction of main sewerage, in which the owner of any building-site are to pay the cost of installation. Some of the Committee thought the rule should apply to streets that may be built in future, but not to existing streets; it was also pointed out the measure would be quite unfair, inasmuch as the city would be forcing the new applicant for sewerage to pay a lump sum for the same privileges that others received out of the general funds.

Mr. Mews gave notice that at the next meeting he would propose a reconsideration of the method of discussing the new Bill. Sections 176 to 184 were discussed and some amendments made. Re section 184, dealing with the disposing of night soil, it was decided that the hours for depositing receptacles containing the same on the sidewalk be between the hours of 10 and 12 o'clock midnight.

The Secretary was ordered to notify the absent members of the committee that their presence would be required at the next meeting, October 23, when important business will come up for discussion.

Into Death Pits Tied to Horses.

German barbarism has harked back to the historic case of Maseppa in devising methods of punishment for natives of "occupied" Belgium found guilty of offending against the Kaiser's Military laws, according to stories told by sixty-five Belgian refugees who arrived in New York on board the steamship Noordam, of the Holland-American line. The new punishment for offences is called the "Maseppa game," and consists of tying culprits to the backs of horses and running the animals to their death in deep pits, the story goes. Mrs. A. Frisque, one of the refugees, declared that she had witnessed several instances of this means of torture, which she described as horrifying. "Many Belgium youths have paid penalty in this way for minor infractions against German military regulations," she said. "I have seen pits filled in this diabolical way until you could see the arms and feet of slain youths sticking above the ground. In most cases the horses chosen to carry the offenders to death are decrepit war animals who have outlived their usefulness in dragging pieces or supply wagons."

Oldest Living Actress.

Whatever she may be in spirit, Miss Genevieve Ward is the oldest well-known actress still on the stage in point of years. She has just been celebrating her 78th birthday. Born the year after Queen Victoria came to the throne, and ten years before Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Ward, who is at present playing a leading part in "The Baskers," with Sir George Alexander, has been acting since she was eighteen.

Italian grand opera was her first love, but after some years as an operatic singer she strained her voice so badly during a tour in Cuba that she was forced to abandon this work.

With that indomitable courage that has always been characteristic of her, Miss Ward turned to the "regular" stage. The first important part she succeeding in securing was that of Lady Macbeth, but it is for her performance in "Forget Me Not" that she is best remembered.

She has played the part of Stephanie in this play over 2,000 times touring 50,000 miles with "Forget Me Not."

By right of marriage Miss Ward is the Countess Cuelber of Russia, but she has never used the title.
