

You Can't Afford to Have Wet Feet

YOU know how important it is to keep your feet warm and dry. Then why don't you wear "Hi-Press" Rubber Boots and Shoes?

They're made a new way—IN ONE SOLID PIECE—they simply CAN'T leak or peel. But the big thing you notice from this new way of making footwear is the added WEAR.—Fishermen everywhere tell us that "Hi-Press" outlasts ordinary boots two and three to one.

You know, in your class of work, that the best is always the most economical. Wear "Hi-Press"—and you will never be satisfied with anything else.

Whenever you buy an article of rubber see that it bears this trade-mark. The wreath and the "G" is the sign of Quality and assurance that the House of Goodrich stands solidly behind its products.

Cutting Hay.

At the beginning of this season's hay has commenced, and from all the end the various farms will be engaged at this work. The crops are all pretty good—in cases excellent—and consequently the price ought to be much lower from that of last year. For the past year or so imported hay has been selling at 50 p.c. cheaper prices locally, and in some cases is better. The first local turnips and cabbages have also been brought to town. The cabbage, selling at 22c. a pound, is well ripe, with solid, white hearts, and the turnips, early Swedish, are quite matured.

Fashions and Fads.

Broad-brimmed picture hats are laden with flowers.
Cotton voile is in greatest favor for summer frocks.
There seems to be fringe in every edge of everything.
Cream-coloured lace over black satin is conspicuous.
A great many sports skirts for fall are box plaited.

When Will the World End?

Forecasts That Haven't Come True.
Religious fanatics are again busy prophesying the end of the world, arguing that the four years of war-horror is but a prelude to oblivion for everyone.
Meanwhile, however, the man in the street is not worrying. Perhaps he remembers the many occasions when the prophets have tried to make his flesh creep with similar bogies.
Now and again, however, people have taken them seriously. The appearance of comets has often been thought to foretell the speedy dissolution of this world. If the tail of a comet touched the earth we should all go up in smoke is the fantastic rumour which has been revived at intervals during recent years.
The story of the comet spread great alarm, however, throughout Europe in 1832, and many persons refrained from undertaking or concluding any business during that year in consequence solely of their apprehension that the terrible comet would dash us and our world to atoms.
October 13th has been a favourite day for prophesying the end of the world. This has its origin in the prophecy of the famous mathematical divine, Dr. Whiston, who, in 1736, said the world would be destroyed in that year on October 13th.
Crowds of people assembled in the big open spaces of London on that date to see the "beginning of the end," but nothing happened, and Whiston became the laughing stock of the Metropolis.

Bees in His Wooden Leg.

Recently, a man was arrested for breaking into a Paris flat, and searched, but at first none of the missing property could be found in his possession. A police commissary, however, bent himself to unscrew the man's wooden leg and examine it. It was then found that eight hundred pounds in securities, which had been taken from the flat, were hidden away in the artificial limb.
This reminds one that many novel uses have been made of wooden legs by their wearers. A few years ago, for instance, a wild man was discovered by a party of hunters in Missouri, stumbling along on a rough-looking wooden leg, which he himself had carved from a tree, and hollowed out.
In the hollow part a swarm of bees were found to be housed—in- deed, the man seemed to be very fond of bees, for he had another swarm housed in a strange old "stovepipe" hat which he was wearing.

Another Marine Tragedy

The schooner "Willie Roy" of Channel, so long missing on a voyage from Port aux Choix to her home port, has not been heard from since July 9th, and another marine tragedy has to be added to our local records. The hope that news would be received has now been abandoned, and the widows and mothers of the men who formed the crew have now to mourn the loss of their loved ones. George Currie and John Farrell were citizens, the loss of which to the town of Channel will be irreparable. They possessed the confidence and friendship of all who knew them, and their integrity and depth of character was appreciated by the whole community. Both were members of the Loy- al Orange Association. Bro. Farrell having served two years in the chair and Bro. Currie the same period in the Deputy chair of Royal William Lodge, No. 20. Their loss to the town will be none the less great than their loss to the town of Channel. That the youngest sons of both men should have gone with them intensifies the tragedy and compels the sympathy of all.

To the sorrowing widows and orphans, so suddenly bereaved, the Telegram extends sincere sympathy, and hopes that the passage of time will, in a measure, help to assuage the grief of those who have been hoping against hope for news of the latest victims of the insatiable sea.
