MY COLUMN

(By the CUB-EDITOR)
MORE ABOUT BRIDGE.

I have already written three articles about Bridge and as I believe they have been fairly well received, I am venturing to write another. Bridge is a greater brain food than anything I know, better even than Virol and fish. That is why I am writing so much about it. Of course, when I say that Bridge is a brain food I do not mean that one has only to take it up and the grey matter starts to form so quickly that before long an empty headed flapper is turned into a "blitz-stocking." That would be too much to expect. It is harder to knock a modicum of sense into the heads of some flappers than it is to blow up Chain Rock with a pop gun. Not even Bridge can work impossibilities. But please do not let it be thought for a single moment that I am speaking of local flappers. Rather am I discussing the species in general. The diverse ways in which Bridge is played are as numerous as the makers of moonshine in Newfoundland. Nearly everyone who takes up Bridge plays on a system of his or her own. Especially does this apply to women, who generally suit their play to the colour of the hat or dress they are wearing. The most amusing sight I have ever seen was that of four Bridge players, two women and two men, all of whom played on a different system, and with varying degrees of interest. There was the old man who considered it a great crime to make a mistake at a Bridge table to break all the ten commandments at the one time, and was ready to commit murder at the slightest sound whilst the game was in progress. As luck would have it, he was partnered with a frivolous young lady whose mind was evidently so filled with the thoughts of her latest "crush," that she could not pay attention to the game, nor yet, use her usually, constantly wagging tongue. The other man was one of those high-browed, intellectuals who took nearly fifteen minutes to play a card having worked it out by applied mathematics and the assistance of Einstein's theory. His partner was a rather stout lady, whose lack of knowledge of the rudiments of Bridge was only equalled by her garrulity. Nothing could have been funnier than to watch this oddly assorted four trying to get through a rubber. In fact, I even made a bet with a sporting friend who was also intent on watching the game, on how long the keen old gentleman would be able to control the string of expletives which seemed to be hovering on his lips. I was really sorry for him. Luckily, however, all Bridge is not like this. Otherwise, I doubt if I would be warranted in taking up so much space in discussing it. And, talking about space, I find I have exceeded my allowance for this time, but don't be surprised if you find "still more about Bridge" in this column before long.

AUCTION SALES.

Women go to auction sales rarely with intent to buy. But their resolution fails. And their self restraint does fly when they see a bargain there. Something that they're looking for. What it costs them they can't spare. Than its value they pay more.

But the fever's in their blood. An other keep on bidding then. Though each thing they get's a "dad." Why do it, few do "then." Hubby doesn't know just why. (In fact, it almost turns him gray.) All these things his wife should say. But this he knows, he has to pay.

SENIORITY.

A small boy, aged four, had just communicated the fact to his uncle that he had started on his school career. "Indeed," said his uncle; "why, you must be the youngest there." "Oh, no," answered the youngster in a very lofty manner, "there's another gentleman who comes in a perambulator."—Tatler (London).

"When I meet a friend these days that I haven't seen in some time he always expresses surprise at the wonderful change in my condition and no wonder, for I'm feeling better than I have in years," said William White, of Sunny Brae, N.B.

"I had no idea a medicine could do as much in a short time as Tanlac did for me. When I began taking it I was almost a physical wreck and was going down hill every day. I couldn't eat to do any good and was so weak I wasn't able to work at all. I needed help and needed it quick and feel that I got Tanlac just in time. It has put me on my feet feeling better and stronger than I have in years. There is no praise too high for Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

WHAT EVERY READER KNOWS.
Bridge: What is this silly season they say comes over the newspapers; how does one know it?

Griggs: Easy. It always begins with an interview with Thomas Edison.

A Splendid Collection.

The Grenfell Hall in the Seamen's Institute contains a gallery of portraits, including that of His Majesty the King, who is the patron of the Institute and who laid the foundation stone in 1911 by pressing an electric button at Buckingham Palace; also those of Her Majesty the Queen; Her Majesty Queen Alexandra; the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York, both of whom have visited the Institute; the Duke of Connaught, who officially opened the Girl's Department when here in 1914, Sir Walter Davidson; the late Mrs. Grenfell, mother of Dr. Grenfell, and three former Presidents of the United States, Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson. Dr. Grenfell has just been presented with two new portraits for the Institute which will be hung shortly in the Grenfell Hall. These are of President Harding and the Duke of Devonshire, both old friends of the Doctor's. The Duke, when Governor-General of Canada, took the greatest interest in Dr. Grenfell's work on the Labrador, and was one of those who used their influence with the British Admiralty to obtain the gift to the Grenfell Association from the Admiralty of the steamer "Wop" last year. The President's portrait bears an autograph inscription as follows: "To those who made the Seamen's Institute a noble
