ALIVE AFTER BEING BURIED FOR NINE DAYS.

FALMOUTH, Scotland, Oct. 4.—Buried alive for nine days, five of the forty miners entombed by an explosion in a coal pit, were rescued to-day. The men were brought to the surface in a fairly good condition, and their remarkable escape from death has raised the hopes of relatives of other prisoners.

ECONOMIC CONFERENCE MEETS.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The Imperial Economic Conference met to-day for a couple of hours. It was officially announced afterwards that the conference, with a view to development of mutual trade, had given preliminary consideration to the following matters:—1. Mutual co-operation in respect to commercial services; 2. Removal of existing obstacles in connection with admission of commercial travellers' samples and trade catalogues; 3. Statistics relating to Empire Trade; 4. Imperial co-operation in respect to patents, designs and trade marks; 5. Valuation of goods for customs duty purposes.

ANOTHER BOOZE CAPTURE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Three police boats captured without a struggle a fifty thousand dollar yacht carrying a sixty thousand dollar cargo of liquor in East River yesterday. The yacht developed engine trouble and the speed was forced down to such an extent that the police boat had little trouble in capturing her.

A REMARKABLE OPERATION.

BUFFALO, Oct. 4.—Chatting from time to time with the man on the operating table, Dr. Hans Finsterer, of the University of Vienna, before a clinic of Buffalo surgeons yesterday, removed a patient's stomach, performed a minor operation on the organ and replaced it. The operation required nearly two hours and the patient was conscious throughout. Dr. Finsterer explained that a special treatment of the solar plexus deadening nerve centres rendered the use of an anaesthetic unnecessary. The physicians examining the patient said he suffered none of the after-effects of shock usually in minor operations.

Mr. Arliss Proves Himself in Comedy

Famous Star Carries Crowd With Him by Incomparable Artistry on the Screen.

"The Ruling Passion," the newest of the George Arliss photoplays, is being shown at the Theatre Royal, and was presented yesterday at the Majestic Theatre, and demonstrated two things. First, that George Arliss is just as great an artist in comedy roles as he is in serious parts, and second, that so far as the audience at the Majestic was concerned, Mr. Arliss need never do another "serious" photoplay. Nothing half so amusing as the artistry of Mr. Arliss has been seen here, although many recall his "Disraeli" as one of the greatest of all love stories, with a greater tendency toward light moments than seemed possible. In "The Ruling Passion," Mr. Arliss is altogether delightful, and from first to last he carried his audience with him from one delightful situation to another. This is a photoplay attraction that no one can well afford to miss.

Director Harmon Weight has given a good account of himself, and Earl Derr Biggers, the author, and Forrest Halsey, the scenario writer, share in the general praise.

The story and plot are indeed simple, but this is carried over into the credit column. We have been crowded with the "serious" photoplays that have come out of Europe, and from our own studios, and "The Ruling Passion" will find welcome as an antidote for too much "heavy stuff." Miss Doris Kenyon, a screen star in her own right, is playing opposite the star in the role of his daughter.

Laid to Rest.

All that was mortal of the late Engineer Charles Cahill, who met accidental death on Tuesday last, was laid to rest yesterday at Belvedere Cemetery. The funeral was one of the largest seen in the city for some time, and took place from the home of the deceased, Topsail Road at 2.30 p.m. A guard of honor from the Brotherhood of the Railroad Firemen and Engineers walked in front of the hearse, while the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, walked in a body. Amongst those who attended the obsequies were General Manager Russell, Supt. White, and the heads of the respective railway departments, besides a large concourse of citizens of all classes and creeds. The prayers for the dead were recited at the Cathedral, following which the remains were taken away to their last resting place, to await the Resurrection Day.

Great Programme Pleases Huge Audience

EXCELLENT SINGING — HIGH CLASS PICTURES AT THE NICKEL.

The Nickel Theatre was packed to the doors last night, when one of the finest programmes of film and song heard and seen in a long time was rendered. Miss Marion Armstrong and Miss Louise Loring were heard to excellent advantage in a group of selections that judging from the ovation were chosen to suit the individual tastes of the audience. Miss Loring sang "Aria" from Cavalleria Rusticana and "Roses In Picardy." Miss Armstrong's numbers were "Her Love Song" and "Mother McCrean." The duets "At Dawning" and "Sweet and Low" were indeed particularly well rendered and evoked great applause from the large audience.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" was certainly all that it was claimed to be, as it is brimful of interest and contains plenty of excitement and more than all there is a real story that was appreciated by all. The great moment in the photoplay comes when the whale which was being hunted, turns on its captors, sweeps one side of the boat, leaving but the stumps of broken oars in the hands of the fear-stricken crew. Back of all this action, however, is one of the most appealing love stories revealed on the screen. The entire action of the film takes place before the eyes of the astounded audience. Every foot of its rings with the dangers of the sea and is permeated with the tang of salt air. It is realism raised to a degree that has been hitherto undreamed of in screen productions. It is the kind of picture that probably will never be made again, not only because of the enormous dangers attending it, but because of the thousand and one difficulties that must have beset those in charge of the making of the production.
