Edward Lloyd, May 13.

Of Lloyd's performance in New York a critic says: "Edward Lloyd, the great English tenor, gave the first of his series of concerts at Marison Square Garden Concert Hall last night. He was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and his songs and ballads were demanded again and again. Mr. Lloyd is without doubt the best exponent of the pure school of English song and ballad singing living. His voice, which is full, rich and even in register, shows no evidence of wear. His method is perfect and his singing faultless. There is no mistaking the language in which Mr. Lloyd sings; it is English pure and simple, each word being as distinctly uttered as though he were speaking. Edward Lloyd, May 13. nn which Mr. Lloyd sings; it is English pure and simple, each word being as distinctly uttered as though he were speaking. Mr. Lloyd never forgets he is on the concert stage, and always, as all concert singers are expected to do in England, holds a copy of music in his hands while singing. He is perfectly familiar with all he sings, and he has too good taste and knowledge of the fitness of things to give the air of an operatic performance to a concert." Remember Edward Lloyd is supported by a brilliant company of artists. The sale of seats to the public commences on Wednesday, 10 a.m., at box office of the Grand Opera House. Gallery tickets (75 cents) on sale before the concert only at the Bell piano store, 211 Dundas street. These admit holders to the east entrance of the Opera House ten minutes before the other doors are opened, thus avoiding the crush and insuring good seats.

Tribute to Alexander Mackenzie and Wilfrid Laurier-Why He Favors Trade Freedom.

Hon. S. H. Blake had a splendid reception in East York on Friday night when he spoke in favor of electing Ald. J. K. Leslie successor to the late Hon. Alex. Mackenzie. Below will be found additional extracts from the address:

extracte from the address:

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE MR. MACKENZIR.
Alexander Mackenzie was a man who stood out as a stalwars among men throughout the world, a man who struck for the right regardless of consequences. Consequences had to go to pieces before Alexander Mackenzie. (Cheers.) God give us more such as he was, honest and true. He liked to think that he could follow him yet, that the influence of Alexander Mackenzie still lived.

Men may say what shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue; but 1, said Mr. Blake, impressively, like to say what a grand reality he was, and what a noble man we may pursue. While some constituencies have been kept open for months, the grass is hardly green upon Mackenzie's grave before you are called upon to elect a successor to him. I srust you are ready. (Cheers.)

(Cheers.)
WHAT THE COUNTRY NEEDS.

I listened with pleasure to-night to the speeches with which you have been so well instructed—better than you may be with instructed—better than you may be with my few words—to the strong words of the representative men of the Young Liberal Club, and we must have good hopes for our country when such men as Mr. Rewell and Mr. Pedley are found among our youth. They have eloquently dealt with the trade question, but to my mind, even before free trade, that which is of vital importance is that this country shall be free from corruption. We may succeed with bad fiscal laws, but let disease and corruption once enter into any land and it is farewell to that country—(cheers)—and therefore it is that I hold of vital importance the purity, the honor and integrity of our land. (Cheers.) (Cheers.)

WORSE THAN '73.

My memory carries me back to twenty years ago when a bargain was entered into years ago when a bargain was chieved into so dishonest, so corrupt, that when it was first whispered about men would not believe it. But letters were discovered and telegrams found and at lest the bargain was laid bare. "If you furnish $360,000 to me to buy up the electors of the Dominion I will repay you," said he who made the bargain, "by giving you property of the people to ten times that amount."

The speaker continued by pointing out that the people of Canada, feeling that if such a gigantic fraud went uncondemned, corruption would eat Into the vitals of the country, condemned the Pacific scandal and turned its authors out of power.

That great crime, done under the shadow of that flag that was made to answer for so much that was damnable, was punished by the people of this country. (Cheers.)

But that crime was condoned; the criminals were again returned to power, and the coal and timber lands, the money and the offices of the country—everything that could be taken—were handed over to the hounds that fed upon our country. (Cheers.) o dishonest, so corrupt, that when it was

Mr. Blake showed how the Pacific scandal had been condemned by the populace, dal had been cendemned by the populace, and again condoned by the return of its perpetrators to power. What followed? The wholesale peculation of the people's land, timber, minerals and money. That was not enough. Then came the infamous Franchise Act and the Elliotizing of London. Mr. Blake's trenchant remarks regarding this outrage have already been published in the ADVERTISER. On the late gerrymander Mr. Blake's address was equally teiling. He said:

THE GERRYMANDER.

THE GERRYMANDER. They made no attempt at an equitable redistribution, as honest men would do. The unit of representation was about 23,000. Nothing impure or impurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung temedy and general corrective, Dr. I may be used without the slightest apprehension of and other than salutary consequences. Coming to the trade question, Mr. Blake said he did not care whether there was when over a million of our population is expatriated? This is a question that strikes at the mass of the people. He would not go in for any rule or regulation whereby one man is enriched at the expense of others. The question is whether we shall continue in the old and bad path or rise like men to better things and times. (Applause.) Some bankers say that freer trade might injure Toronto. But there were many like Mr. Mulock, who say they do not eare if they are pinched a little if the laboring men and the farmer are relieved. (Applause.) If there was any pinching it would come upon those who could bear it best. He did not like it when a rich client came to him the other day and said, "do you know what you are doing?" a rich client came to him the other day and said, "do you know what you are doing?" He replied that he did. (Applause.) He wanted the workingman and the farmer to get their rights. (Applause) "But," the client said, "it will injure your property." "I don't care," replied Mr. Blake, "I can stand it and they can't. (Applause.) If the dividends of rich men are reduced from 10 to 9 per cent. or from 9 to 8 per cent., a little poverty may do them good. (Applause.) It will start them thinking about 10 to 9 per cent. or from 9 to 8 per cent., a little poverty may do them good. (Applouse.) It will start them thinking about others reduced in circumstances. (Applause.) It will all come right in the true way. Larger markets and larger industries will come, and all will be better, even if there is a little difficulty in regulating the balance-wheel at first. They must insist that the red parlor schemes shall end. (Applause.) He hoped that free trade would soon be unknown on a public platform because it had passed into law by the voice of the people. (Applause.)

He wanted John Knox Leslie elected because he wanted him to go to Ottawa to comfort the heart of Wilfrid Laurier. Their leader had met with some defeats lately, and when a man is defeated he likes another to come in and shake him by the hand. He wanted them to cheer the heart of Mr. Laurier by telegraphing to him on Wednesday that East York is true to a man that is true to them. (Applause.) Amidst all the corruption and robbery Mr. Laurier stands as a great shaft, Abdiet like: "Faithful found among the faithless." Some yahoos had sought to cast dirt on this honorable man. It was said that Mr. Laurier was involved in some of the robbery. Oh! the man who forged that lie and published it will get a hot place when universal punishment is given!
Mr. Laurier was as true as steel, true to his country, faithful to himself, f He wanted John Knox Leslie elected be Mr. Laurier was as true as steel, true to his country, faithful to himself, faithful to his God. Let the electors of East York be faithful to him and teach him that Alexander Mackenzie, though dead, still speaks. (Applause.) Let them answer the faithfulness of Alexander Mackenzie and Wilfrid Laurier by being true to a leader of whom any man in the world might well be proud. (Great applause.)

For years and years they had attacked China and Japan for excluding foreigners from trading with them. They used to say it was a proof of the barbarianism of these countries that they would not have free trade. It took a century to batter down the stone wall around China. The infatuation of manufacturers and the foolable by them said: Let us take these battered walls and put them around this country, because England demands it.
