DILLON ATTACKED

Almost a Riot at the Close of the Convention.

Dublin, Sept. 4.—Following the close of the Irish convention there was almost a riot in Sackville street, and Mr. John Dillon and a number of his friends were compelled to seek refuge in the Imperial Hotel. After leaving Leinster Hall, Mr. Dillon, escorted by 50 or 60 members of the convention, walked up Sackville street, which was densely crowded. The delegates were followed by a noisy mob of about 1,000 youths, who were gathering round the hall and who were evidently not in sympathy with the Dillonites. The leaders of the mob kept shouting: "With the Dillonites! With the Dillonites!" and other missiles began flying through the air. To these cries the Dillonites replied by singing "God Save Ireland," increasing the riotous demonstration and largely adding to the number of the mob following them up Sackville street. The police on duty were not able to cope with the roughs, and reinforcements had to be hurried to the scene.

The police soon turned into Sackville street strong numbers, and were just in time to stop what was beyond a doubt a growing riot which might have had most serious consequences for the Dillonites. The police were thrashing and ducking Dillon, causing him and his party to hurriedly take refuge in the Imperial Hotel, which was afterwards surrounded by a strong force of police, which kept the rioters at bay.

GOLD DEMOCRATS.

Nominate Senator Palmer and Gen. Buckner—Their Platform.

Indianapolis, Sept. 4.—With the nomination of Senator John M. Palmer, of Illinois, for President and Gen. Simon Buckner, of Kentucky, for Vice-President, and the adoption of a platform, the convention of the National Democratic party—the anti-free silver wing—adjourned its second session.

The platform states that the Democratic party is pledged to equal and honest government to all men of every creed and condition, and to the largest freedom of the individual, consistent with good government; to the preservation of the Federal Government in its constituent vigor, and to the support of the States in all their just rights; to economy in the public expenditures; to the free coinage of silver, as a scheme for the personal profit of a few at the expense of the many, and opposes the parties which stand for these schemes.

It denounces protection and its ally, free coinage of silver, as schemes for the personal profit of a few at the expense of the many, and opposes the parties which stand for these schemes.

A COWARD PUNISHED.

Gen. Buckner's Nomination Recalls a Tragic Incident of 1862.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Gen. Simon B. Buckner, nominated by the gold Democrats for Vice-President, was the cause of a sensational incident in the railway station at Buffalo in the spring of 1862.

On Feb. 18 of that year Buckner surrendered Fort Donelson, himself and 12,000 and 20,000 men, to Gen. Grant. As a prisoner of war, he and a number of other officers were brought north to be held in any state prison.

When the prison train stopped in Buffalo, there was a large crowd at the depot, and the soldiers and sailors of the Union army were present.

One man, who had preferred to stay away from the war, evidently desired to show to the bystanders his animosity toward the South. He asked which one of the prisoners was Gen. Buckner, and on being told stepped forward and spat in the face of the defenseless Confederate chief.

The Union officer in charge of the guard had different ideas of civility. He drew his sword and struck the head of the fellow who had insulted Buckner. The blade carried away the man's ear and a large slice of his head.

Very Base Ball

Played by the Aldermen and School Trustees.

The City Fathers Trounced in a Side-Splitting Game.

Great Exhibition of the National Sport—Heavy Hitting and Bank Fielding.

It was really beautiful and inspiring in this sordid age to see the men on whom lay the crushing weight of a great city, throw aside their burdens for a day, and disport themselves like schoolboys on the green, the cares and perplexities that fall to the lot of greatness forgotten in the simple joys of a baseball game.

How it must have recalled their happy childhood days, when in bare feet and high-water pants they chased the elusive sphere! Nor little dreamed they that in the boiled shirt bosoms and stand-up collars of maturer years, they should still indulge the sportive zeal of frisky youth. But to the game:

It was a brilliant match, and one that, had it been played on Tecumseh Park on a holiday, would have attracted five thousand people. If the aldermen ever did anything to displease the educationalists, the latter had good cause to revenge yesterday. They claim it was a distinct triumph of mind over matter. The game was something like baseball, and the scene on the little plot west of the pump house at Springfield, where so many phantasms have loomed up as future Ansons and Kellys. At 2 o'clock both teams tried to fix things up, and make it easy for themselves. Ned Hunt, Alf Wilkins and George Griffin were peaked sailor caps to keep the sun out of their eyes and save their complexions. Urble Buchner came prepared to do or die, in inflated short bloomers, and a bicycle sun-bonnet.

While the players were busy learning where the bases were, which end of the bat was the right one to hit with, and wondering whether they were going to play with a "hard ball like that," about six hundred people had gathered, and commenced to laugh right away. They knew that, were the game to be half as funny in character as the first inning, the players, their sides would ache for a week. Frank Love went down to decide the legal points of the game.

At 2:30 the umpire, Mr. Gillespie, "play," and the school dictators began to wander into the field, some of the "big fellows" scampering, while some crawled out like lobsters, and had little social chats on the way. Alf Cooper thought he was in the center, and shouted "Hurry up, you fellows; we want to get a-go!" It bothered some of them to know just what to run on when they came to bat, and it bothered some to run on everything, excepting the umpire. After this, Urble Buchner took his place in the pitcher's den, while Charlie Johnston, far enough away behind the bat to make sure the ball wouldn't hurt.

Hughie Douglass was the first batter to take the field, and he stepped up to the plate he looked down at Urble with a pleading look, which said, "Pitch 'em easy. Urble banged his head, and he was equal to the plate. The next ball hit Hughie's bat, and ran up his sleeve, alighting on his nose. He did not stand on ceremony, but he took a good look at the pitcher, and he was equal to the plate. The next ball hit Hughie's bat, and ran up his sleeve, alighting on his nose.
