DONOVAN GETS
HIS OLD FRIENDSenators' Manager Trades Orth.
Securing Two Pitchers
in Return.

Manager Donovan, of the Senators, got busy this week, and pulled off another deal that looks good for all parties concerned. This time Albert Ed. Orth is pushed forward, and he is to be sent to New York in exchange for Pitchers Hughes and Wolfe. Orth has been disappointed at Washington for some time.

Griffith, of the Highlanders, now realizes that he will have a team of unusual strength to make a showing in the "big league" the last month of the championship race. The deal has not yet been completed, as there is a hitch over the contract that Hughes has with the New York club, but the chances are that matters will be straightened out shortly, and the transfer made.

Hughes was the star pitcher of the Boston club last year until the world's series with Pittsburgh, when he was the pitcher who was used to the best of the present deal is that Manager Donovan and Hughes are close friends, and the deal is a matter of personal friendship.

One thing in favor of the present deal is that Manager Donovan has expressed a desire to come to Washington. When in right trim there is not a better twirler in the country than Hughes.

Of Wolfe there is little known, as he has been pushed to the rear on account of being with a team that has many stars in the twirling line. In 1903 he was one of the best pitchers in the New York State League, and was secured by Griffith on his first try. He has plenty of speed, and may turn up a winner in Washington.
