Jacob Schaefer in a published card denies, as far as he is concerned or knows, that there was anything crooked in the closing game of the recent billiard tournament between himself and Maurice Vignaux.

Jeson's think he will.

Jacob Schaefer, whose performance at Chicago on Friday night makes him the champion of the world, was born in Chicago and is 25 years old He is what is termed a fine natural player. Though remarkably brilliant, he has not heretofere been extraordinsrily successful, and had wen but four out of nine matches played since 1879. He won two tournaments before that just ended; yet, when he afterwards met the two strongest players in match games he was defeated. In previous games played with Sexton, Schaefer had an equal number of victories, while his record with Slosson shows three victories sut of seven games.

what is behind it. Sullivan has a big, strong hand May. on him, and Slade's is, I understand, large; but that fact is worth no.hing in calculating their chances in a fight. A big, soft hand is too much like a boxing glove to be of much account. My hand is perhapsa little larger than most men of my weight have, but that co es from the work I did shoveling sand and handling heavy weights no foundry when I was young, and afterward in riveting be, deers. The third and fourth fingers are the onest that do the most of the work in a fight, not that do the most of the work in a fight, not the kinuckle of the second, as many imagine. Therefore, 150 bush, 251 bush, 252 bush; bush, 252 bush; bush, 253 bush; bush, 253 bush; bush, 254 bush; bush, 255 b weight havo, but that coles from the work I did shoveling sand and handling heavy weights not foundry when I was young, and a'terward in riveting briders. The third and fourth fingers are the onea that do the most of the work in a fight, not the knuckle of the second, as many imagine. They are consequently the ones that suffer most. I broke these fingers on my right hand on Collyer, May 2, 1870, in the third round of the fight, but hardly noticed it, and went on through the fight, using them as if they had not been harmed. But when I broke that bone in the middle of my left hand on Tim Co lins in the second round on May 25, 1871, it effectually settled the use of my hand during the rest of the fight. I could hardly have killed a fly with it and had to do all my work with the right hand. Pets McCoy has a small sh hand—yes, I may may, very small—and he is a very good man. Professor McClelland has a large hand for a man of his sug, but that no doubt comes from his having for racely been a sailor. Handling the ropes of a vessel is certain to develop the hands, and the salt water toughens and hardens them. Arthur Chambers has a smallish hand—net much of a cutting hand so far as I can see, but a good, solid hand. Mace has a middle sized hand, and so has Joe Cohurn. Perhaps Coburn's has a sre a little large for his size, but he is a big man. Sayers had not a very large hand, not as large as this new man, Mitchell, has. I flink Mitchell's hands are of quite good size. What a man requires in the ring is solidity, not size of hand. The pickle I have used has been composed of vinegar, alum, lemon juice, horserwish, and sometimes tartaric acid and rock salt. It Coppers I do not use, as, it is poisonous, and, in my opinion, dangerous. Simple salt water is very good. The main thing, however, is rubbing. The Pains of Sport.

A correspondent of The St. James' Gazette writes *Last week I was in a very good coursing country, and while taking a walk I heard some excited men ealling. Loo! Loo! I stood still, and presently saw a hare skimming the grass of the great field which I was crossing. The little creature headed directly for me, and I saw that she was followed by a black dog and a red one. She came as straint as an arrow, and I soon heard the walloping sound of he greyhou da feet. Poor puss did not see me, and thus I had the advantage of observing the first turn. The black dog quickened his speed, dashed forward, lifted his head with an arch of the neck, like the curve of a snake, and then struck at the hare. The hunted creature whisked sharply round, and then the red dog struck. This turned the hare again toward me, and she hased me so closely that I might have hit her. If ever I saw ago, y made manifest it was in that poor creature's frame. In the moment that she took to k to pass me I saw that she seemed to be gaz ng back ward, and her great eye looked ox aggerated in size. Her back was arched up, and eich spring was like the unloosing of a bow. She had a long way to go, a d before she had traveled far the dogs had got up to her. The black dog was a grim dog, and I watched him pols himself carefully as he gathered his energy for another effort. The hare again twe thed herself round was if by magic and the black dog gerambled to the left, losing a dozen yards or so. But the red was there, and the hought puss back toward me and snatched at her. A piece of fluff flew into the air, and the hought puss back toward me and snatched at her. measure is completed logically? I saw one here whose hind leg was torn from the quarter to the bend by one grip from a dog that falsed to keep his hold. She gave a dozen more turns after that clutch was laid on her, and I fancy she suffered to some extent. I am aware that t e enjoyment given to the men was great; and I saw that they must be deriving health from their tramp over the odorous plowed land and the pleasant grass.
