TAKE CARE OF THE STRAW—in the older sections of the country the value of straw is so far appreciated that the torch is now seldom applied to the straw stack, as was once the case, and yet it is doubtful if there is any great proportion of our farmers who fully realize the actual worth of good straw. To know that it is too valuable to burn and that it should be applied in some shape to the land, is not enough known. It has far more value than this as food for stock, and when the hay is appreciated the haphazard way of preserving it which is adopted by so many farmers will be reformed. If there are means so rapidly at hand to save the consumption of so valuable a product as hay, to refuse to utilize them certainly not the parts of wisdom; and that straw will not only sometimes meet and satisfy a necessity, but is required by stock even when they are properly made it plain that straw is a valuable substitute for hay. It can be fed with mixed feed, either alone or with hay, after having been steamed, and will be eaten with relish and profit by stock. The expense of a steamer, however, may be an obstacle with some, but while you think this a very desirable way of feeding straw, we are glad to say that the steamer is not indispensable. If good, clean, bright straw is placed in the stock yards it will be observed often that cattle and sheep will leave good hay to eat it, either by experience, or in need of something of that character, or that they desire a change. At all events, they eat it, and not only eat it, but do well on it. This is especially true of sheep. If good straw is placed in the rack, the sheep will eat it readily, carefully picking it over for the grain remaining in it, and showing a very great liking for parts of the straw. Sheep can be wintered on good wheat straw, if the grain has been harvested early enough and properly, without any hay whatever. We would not recommend anything of this kind, but we simply refer to the fact, which has been fully established by experience, to show that there is no nutriment in what used to be considered totally barren of nutritive qualities. If that nothing else to recommend it than its value as bedding, and to some degree take the place of food by preserving the animal heat and adding to the comfort of the animal; and besides this, such a use would place it where it would most readily be rotted and converted into valuable manure. This becomes secondary in importance, however, after its actual value as food has been established.

There is a paper in the West End who has learned a lesson that will last her a lifetime. She has been for many years wearing paper bags, such as the kind that are used for flour, and tied a string round the mouth of it, and left it in a chair. The good lady took it and tied it on, and dressed herself for church. She bribed her husband to go with her, though he is a sort of Bob Ingersoll Christian. As they went up the aisle, the minister was reading a hymn about 'Sounding the loud hosanna,' and the lady went in the pew first, and sat down while her husband was putting his hat on the floor. There was a report like distant thunder. You have heard how those confounded paper bags explode when they blow them up and crush them between their hands. Well, it was worse than that, and everybody looked at the innocent husband, who was standing there a perfect picture of astonishment. He looked at his wife, as much as to say: 'Now this is the last time you will catch me in a church if you are going to play any of your tricks on me. You think you can scare me into getting religion.'

Did he teach you to lie? they asked of her concerning his employer. And the lad drew himself up proudly and said: 'No, sir. He couldn't do it. I'm the son of a Congressman. Blood will tell.'

A New York wag bet five hundred dollars that he could get a popular missionary an old boss in a hundred plain applique by it. He attended a meeting held by the missionary, and when they were passing round the plate he rose, and stretching out his hand, he said: 'Here is a hundred-dollar note for the old boss in the pulpit,' which remark was greeted with applause. He made four hundred dollars by the little joke.

Apple Jelly—Red.—Proceed as for apple jelly, adding a little cochineal for color just before finishing.

Apple Jelly—Cran.—Cut Siberian crab apples to pieces, do not pare or remove the seeds, as the latter impart a peculiarly pleasant flavor to the jelly; put them in a healthy, add sufficient water; cover and stew until tender; strain and allow 1 lb of sugar to every pint of juice.

Apple Jam (Marmalade).—Sprinkle peel very ripe apples; break the stones and blanch the kernels; add half of them to the bruised fruit; to the remainder add 1 lb of pounded sugar; mix well together in the preserving pan; let it dissolve; then boil fast for about twenty-five minutes, stirring from the bottom all the time with a large wooden spoon; remove the scum as it rises.

Washing Towels.—Towels with hand- some, bright borders, should never be boiled or allowed to lie in very hot water; they should not be used till they are so much soiled that they need vigorous rubbing to make them clean. It is better economy to use more towels than to wear out a few in a short time; gentle rubbing in warm water and then in cold, ought to be all that is required.
