Since my last report I have communicated with the superintendents of schools lor the deaf in every State of the Union, and have obtained information regarding this matter from the British Isles and Europe. In some of the States in the Union a compulsory education law is in force and in every place where such is not the case the education law is in force and in every place where such is not the case the superintendents of schools for deaf deplore the fact, and declare how much it is needed. In England, Scotland and Wales the compulsory education of the deaf is enforced the supering children.
