

Repeat verse 15. Then Jesus told the woman a great many things she had done. No one had told him about them, so she knew that Jesus must be God, and after she had given him a drink she ran to tell people to come and see the God-man. She wanted to tell them so much that she forgot all about the water she came for, and left her waterpot at the well. Here it is now.

[The well: Take a piece of card or bristol board about the size of a sheet of note paper and fasten the ends together. Cut out and fit over the top of this a circular piece of board, representing the curb, about an inch in width. A round box or a tin can covered with brown paper could be used for a well.]

[Bucket: This was of leather, with three sticks across the mouth to keep it open. Take a piece of brown paper three inches long and one inch wide. Fasten the ends together so that it will assume a circular shape. Insert wire for a bail. Also provide a long piece of twine for letting the bucket down the well. If desired, the three sticks referred to may be made use of.]
