

Courtesy, has a Mixture of Viceroyalty in it) it is likewise necessary he should be endowed with many Qualities, which, in a General more immediately under the Eye of the Government, are not so absolutely requisite. His military Talents (though certainly very material) are perhaps the least to be considered; for as the Nature of that War (now the French are, in Appearance, out of the Question) is confined to the Petite Guerre, or Partizan War, it can scarcely happen that he should be under the Necessity of acting in Person.

His first and essential Business will therefore be to make himself Master of the Geography of that Country, not by poring over defective Maps, and the Legends of Missionaries, in his great Chair at Head Quarters, but by visiting himself, (as far as is consistent with his personal