

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

xi

|                                                                                  | PAGE |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|
| Mrs. Le Fay.....                                                                 | 187  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XVI. ).....                                     | 189  |
| "This would undermine the Church.".....                                          | 190  |
| Sir Cote Male Taile.....                                                         | 192  |
| "We were challenged by the warders, and after parley admitted.".....             | 194  |
| King Uriens.....                                                                 | 199  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XVII. ).....                                    | 201  |
| "After prayers we had dinner.".....                                              | 202  |
| "Original agony.".....                                                           | 203  |
| "I caught a picture that will not go from me.".....                              | 208  |
| "They have a right to their view. I only stand to this.".....                    | 213  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XVIII. ).....                                   | 215  |
| The Church, the King, the Nobleman, and the Freeman.....                         | 218  |
| The Queen's Own.....                                                             | 223  |
| "Children of Monarchy by the Grace of God and the Established Church.".....      | 226  |
| "How old are you, Sandy?".....                                                   | 229  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XIX. ).....                                     | 231  |
| "Then Sir Marhaus ran to the duke, and smote him with his spear.".....           | 233  |
| "The troublesomest old sow of the lot.".....                                     | 237  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XX. ).....                                      | 239  |
| Sandy with Royalty.....                                                          | 243  |
| "We got the hogs home.".....                                                     | 246  |
| Supreme Head of the Church, and Some Other Heads.....                            | 249  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XXI. ).....                                     | 251  |
| Sandy and The Boss at the Second Table.....                                      | 253  |
| "It had in it a sample of about all the upper occupations and professions."..... | 257  |
| A Band of Slaves.....                                                            | 260  |
| A Foundling.....                                                                 | 267  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XXII. ).....                                    | 269  |
| "There are ways to persuade him to abandon it.".....                             | 273  |
| "At the twelfth repetition they fell apart in chunks.".....                      | 275  |
| "He unlimbered his tongue and cursed like a bishop.".....                        | 279  |
| The Spirit of the Church.....                                                    | 283  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XXIII. ).....                                   | 285  |
| "The Abbot's solemn procession.".....                                            | 290  |
| "That fellow on the pillar, standing rigid.".....                                | 292  |
| "Bgvjjilligkkk!!".....                                                           | 293  |
| "What is it you call it? Chuckleheads.".....                                     | 297  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XXIV. ).....                                    | 299  |
| "Sandy was worn out with nursing.".....                                          | 302  |
| Overbalanced.....                                                                | 305  |
| The False Prophet going to Meet the King.....                                    | 310  |
| "A child's affair for simpleness.".....                                          | 313  |
| Initial Letter. ( Chapter XXV. ).....                                     | 315  |