

ration, your Reverence. A People justly celebrated, not only for Ingenuity and Learning, Sprightliness of Wit, Depth and Penetration of Thought, Delicacy and Politeness of Taste, and every other refined Quality human Nature boasts of; celebrated, not for these elegant Accomplishments only, or the Greatness of their Power, the Extent of their Commerce, the Splendor and Magnificence of their Wealth, but their unbounded Liberality, their Munificence, their publick Justice and Honour, their invincible Love of Liberty, their bold Struggles and heroick Efforts to secure and continue it to themselves and others; their Courage and Magnanimity, Battles, Trophies, and Monuments of Victory, and whatever else ennobles and aggrandizes a Nation,

tion,