

ANALYTICAL INDEX

CHAPTER II

SOME ASPECTS OF GREEK SOCIETY

	PAGE
§ 1. Greece the meeting-place of East and West : Culture of Homeric Age : The political organisation—Monarchy tempered by advice . . . . .	28
§ 2. The Homeric era a transition : From village to polis : Aristocracy and colonisation : Effect of expansion on custom : Influence of trade . . . . .	30
§ 3. The new type : Thales : Effect of science on religion : Previous decay of religion : Universalism : Xenophanes on unity . . . . .	32
§ 4. Milesian cosmology : Decline of traditional reverence : Defects of this phase . . . . .	35
§ 5. Religious movements : Orphism : Its brotherhoods : Its affinity with popular life : Compared with Christianity : Its defects and corruption . . . . .	37
§ 6. Foundations of morality : Homeric idea of conduct : Its defects : Gradual emergence of fundamental points : Orphism in comparison with this . . . . .	40
§ 7. Social conduct : Idea of justice : Legal sanctions : Formal legislation exists without the spirit of justice . . . . .	42
§ 8. Development of democracy in Greece : Land becomes private property : Struggles of the eighth century : Reaction of colonies : Manufacture and its influence : Money and wealth : Union of lower classes : Inherent defect of the movement . . . . .	44
§ 9. Progress toward union of thought : Early lack of system : Atomism unifies science : The reign of law : Relation of law to conduct : Effect of medical theories on laws of life . . . . .	47