knew the farming side of the west as well as the business side of the east. And now I'm going to put 25 years of experience in Canada and Britain into a weekly paper. Curiously enough, my brother, who has been 25 years in the west, used to write to me that I would never stay permanentay in England, but would come back to Canada and have a paper of my own. It will, I think, have a more indimate note about it than anything that is being offered to the Britisher at present. It did not require any courage in the five years ago to come back to Canada and bring my family with me. But most fel-lows who come to us from Britain give the greatest proof of sublime courage, even for the man with a cock-ney accent may be sublimely brave. I have great sympathy and admiration for him, and I am going to try to tell him what Canada is like before he gets here; and I will try to help him to
