The Abduction Case Brought to a Close.

Mrs. Currell, Mrs. Stevenson and Mrs. Gray All Wanted the Dimpled Darling.

The Case Disposed of by the Mother Taking Back Her Little Girl.

There was another pathetic scene at the police station this morning, when the abduction case adjourned from last week was taken up. Little May Gray looked as beautiful as'ever, and clung around the neck of Mrs. Stevenson, her aunt, into whose face she looked with innocent smiles and pressed on her pure and childish kisses. She had on the same garnet dress she —Samuel Piper, blacksmith, of West-minster, has laid an information with Squire J. B. Smyth against Sylvester hung in clusters over her tiny shoulders. Mr. McEvoy-I understand, then, that if it was to be merely a question of who gets the child, that the proceedings against Mrs. Stevenson would be dropped.

Mr. McKillop-No, I didn't consent to that. Mr. McEvoy-Well, we'll go on with this case and get it out of the way first. Continuing, Mr. McEvoy said the money had been sent to Mrs. Gray, but that his learned friends had managed to keep her out of the way until the last minute. He did not know but that the women and counsel had met and decided what should be

At this juncture Mrs. Gray walked into the room. She is tall and fine-featured, but very thin. Her face was deathly pale. As Mrs. Stevenson advanced to meet her in a sisterly way, Mrs. Gray turned her back, with the emark, "No, I don't want anything to do with you.' The child was left alone on the bench, and her mother rushed to caress her, but was intercepted by

"Let her see her child if she wants to," said the magistrate. Mrs. Stevenson obeyed, and little May's face grew crimson. It was with some hesitation that the child was caressed, even by her own mother, whom she didn't seem to know. Mrs. Stevenson-I don't think it is right for me to have to meet my sister here, when her mind has probably been poisoned by others.

Mrs. Gray took the child and kissed it, exclaiming, "Oh, my little darling!" Mrs. Hickson is improving very slowly since she left the hospital. The revival meetings carried on here by Rev. Mr. Kerr, of Mount Brydges, have come to a very satisfactory close. The young people in this section have nearly all joined the church. This is making a good step in the right direction, for which Mr. Kerr considers he is well rewarded.

An Epworth League has been started. Meetings are neld on Monday nights, led by Rev. Mr. Kerr. The meetings are well attended. There is a good opening for a blacksmith shop here at these corners. There is a spring creek near by, also a good brick school house on the opposite corner, and the postoffice on another. A storekeeper ought to do well there, too, as there is none near by, and the people generally go to Strathroy for their goods, seven miles away. A good blacksmith, with an intelligent family, could carry on all these branches of business within themselves, and prosper in the midst of this prosperous farming commun-

A neighbor advised me to try his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medi-cine, and less than half a bottle cured I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the
