Unknown Candidate In Reserve For Peace Negotiations

Unnatural and Probably Temporis to be considered that Count von Hertling is intended only as a chancellor for an uncertain interval, and that hidden powers behind the scenes have desired to use him and Dr. Michaelis to keep the place warm for the candidate whom Professor Rudolf Valentini, chief of the Emperor's civil cabinet, had intimated the Emperor was keeping in reserve for the peace negotiations. Count Von Hertling's age, and the unnatural and therefore probably temporary division of the offices of chancellor and prime mniister, such as is proposed, suggests the possibility that the seventh chancellorship is intended to last only until the threshold of the peace negotiations have been reached.

The fact that Count von Hertling's of the Emperor's civil cabinet, had in-

The fact that Count von Hertling's first conference after receiving the Emperor's offer was with Count von Westarp, the Conservative leader, has attracted comment. It is mentioned in connection with his Clerical-Conserva tive antecedents, his record in the Reichstag and his attitude regarding parliamentarism and Alsace-Lorraine, as showing that he can scarcely forget the past sufficiently to be a Progressive head of a modernized German adminis-

The Tageblatt says the Radical and Socialist representatives consulted expressed their opinion as to his unsuitability directly to Count von Hertling. The Lokal Anzeiger prints the report that Arnold Wahneschaffe, former un-der-secretary and chief of the imperial chancellor under Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, is scheduled to return to a similar confidential position if Count von Hertling takes the chancellorship. The newspaper expresses the fear that this means the return of Dr. von Beth-mann-Hollweg's system.

Saving Michaelis' Face. The Berlin newspapers agree in stating that Count von Hertling was tendered only the post of imperial chancellor and not that of Prussian premier. According to a well-defined report it is purposed to retain Dr. Michaelis in the latter post to supervise the fate of the post to supervise the fate of the to diminish, as far as possible, the loss of prestige caused by him by his short tenure of office in the chancellorship.

The Socialist newspaper Vorwaerts says it understands that the Prussian franchise measures have now been drafted and will be ready for submission to the Diet as soon as they re-ceive the royal signature. It reports them as consisting of three separate bills, covering the change in the franchise requirements for the lower chamber, the reform of the House of Lords, and the extension of the budget rights of the lower house.

The franchise contemplated is based upon equal suffrage, but with extended residence qualifications, the newspaper explains. The bill for a general redistribution of the electoral districts will not be introduced at present, it is stated, but legislation providing for an extra member in twelve particularly large districts will be submitted.

The new chancellor's name has been anathema to the Pan-Germans of the anathema to the Pan-Germans of the Count von Reventlow stripe, owing to the belief that he is not their man as far as the annexation programme is concerned. Von Hertling and Foreign Minister von Kuehlmann have been coupled in the Pan-German abuse, but von Hertling's Conservative orthodoxy concerning parliamentary reform may be sufficient to overthrow this prejudice. Much will depend on his attitude on Prussian franchise reform, concerning which he has been silent, on the ground that this is Prussia's own affeir.

A survey of the German press shows count von Hertling's candidacy was regarded on all sides, except by his own Centre party, as decidedly guestionable.

Centre party, as decidedly questionable, if not as a subject for grave concern. The tone of the Radical and Socialist press indicates the probability that the appointment would not end the latent crisis, but would occasion its revival at an early date.

The organs of these two parties, despite the good impression made by the Count's procedure in consulting with the Reichstag Jeaders before making his decision, frankly oppose his elevation to the chancellorship because of his adverse attitude towards parliamentarism, his affiliations with the Conservative wing of the Clerical party, and the fear that his election may be a trick to split the present majority bloc and form a fresh non-Socialist bloc, with the Conservatives and Clericals as the leading elements. The war trophies exhibition which opened in the St. Andrew's rink yesterday proves to be one of the most interesting collections imaginable. The great array of articles from the battle-fields of Europe give the observer a more accurate idea of some of modern developments of the art of war than many columns of descriptive matter and the appearance of the exhibits, many of them showing the marks of actual warfare, help the observer to realize more fully than ever before what the men at the front are facing.
