KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

W. J. Mahoney, Robert Murphy and Charles O'Neill, the local delegates to the Knights of Columbus convention which took place in Chatham, returned home by the Halifax express last evening. They were accompanied to the city by John Brown, of St. John's (Nfid.); Charles O'Neill Conway, of St. John's (Nfid.); T. Hanihan, of Harbor Grace (Nfid.), and Father Finn, of Harbor Grace (Nfid.), who were also in attendance at the convention.

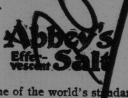

Mr. Mahoney still holds the title of master of the fourth degree. T. Hanihan, one of the Newfoundland delegates, is superintendent of schools for Newfoundland. He and Superintendent Bridges met on the way here, and he visited some of the schools today. KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

THE ELEVENTH EDITION

Encyclopaedia E Britannica

the printing of which is now completed, is the last word in the art of assembling and co-ordinating the facts of science, history, art and life. The experience of all former makers of encyclopædias has been profited by, their mistakes have been studied and avoided, their omissions have been noted and corrected.

A NEW METHOD INVENTED

To accomplish this result an entirely new method had to be invented, and something very like genius was needed to conceive and carry out that method—the kind of genius which is born of practical imagination and intelligent patience. When the necessary organization had been established and the old methods had been revolutionized, it took eight years and nearly a million and a quarter dollars to bring the Encyclopædia Britannica to the form in which it is now offered to the public. Yet such is the perfection of the new method that the 29 volumes are practically of a uniform date—the year 1910.

FAULTS OF FORMER EDITIONS

THE last completely new edition, the Ninth, was a very great work, the product of great minds, the fruit of great traditions and splendid intentions. But apart from the fact that it is now woefully out of date, it had serious drawbacks and grave faults. Its publication extended over many years; it was not issued as a whole, but was written and published volume by volume, the first volume in 1875, the last in 1889, while 11 supplementary volumes (constituting, with the 9th Edition, the so-called 10th Edition) were issued in 1902. Thus the information given under the letter A was many years old when the matter falling under the letter Z was written. This gave rise to contradictions and inconsistencies and prevented the attainment of that congruity and co-ordination which are such striking features of the new edition. Then, too, in the Ninth Edition, a great deal of useful information was buried and practically lost. This came of the general method formerly employed in the composition of the Encyclopædia Britannica and other publications of the kind. What really amounted to a text-book on a certain subject was thrown bodily into the work, and if a reader wanted to refer to some matter which formed part of that large subject he had often to search patiently but without result through pages of text. The new method has changed all that. The editors have succeeded in combining comprehensiveness with brevity, exhaustive exposition of major subjects with the greatest facility of reference in the case of minor ones. faults. Its publication extended over many years; it was not

A COSMOPOLITAN POINT OF VIEW

ONE other fault which was justly found with the old Encyclopædia Britannica was that its point of view, being too essentially British, was not sufficiently international. That reproach certainly cannot be laid against the new Britannica. It is a work of international scholarship to a degree never before realized. The 40,000 articles in the Encyclopædia have been written by some 1,500 contributors. Every article is the work of a first-hand authority, irrespective of whether he happened to live in the British Empire, in the United States, France, Germany, Japan, or any other civilized country. For the first time, too, in the history of the making of encyclopædias really adequate editorial control has been exercised. The whole of the manuscript has been continuously under the view of a large staff of editors. Every contributor was enabled to work with a thorough knowledge of what his colleagues were doing, and a unity of method was thus ensured which will be vainly sought in any other work of the kind.

BULK PROBLEM SOLVED BY THE USE OF INDIA PAPER THE volumes of the 9th edition were 2½ inches in thickness. For most persons their size militated greatly against their usefulness. The old cumbrous volumes are now to be superseded by thin, light, flexible volumes 1 inch thick, printed on opaque and strong India paper. (The new edition is also being printed for those who may prefer it, on ordinary book paper, similar to that used for the Ninth Edition.) In the India paper impression, the volumes of the Eleventh Edition, though containing 1,000 pages each, will be as easy to hold as a novel or a pamphlet. Bound in flexible leather covers, a volume may be doubled back, cover to cover, without injury, held in one hand, and so read in comfort. The usefulness of the Encyclopædia Britannica will therefore be multiplied to an incalculable degree. OBJECT OF THE LOW ADVANCE OF PUBLICATION PRICES THE Press of the University of Cambridge (England), publisher of the new Encyclopædia Britinnica, has, for two or three months past, been offering highly a wantageous terms to

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

ERY Saturday afternoon this spring there has passed by my study window a very pretty couple—quite the prettiest that ever passes down the street, to my way of thinking.

One of these two is a big six-footer of a man, and the other is a little tow-headed youngster who reaches just about to the six-footer's knees.

They are Dad and Junior, and Saturday being Dad's day off, they are going to take a walk in the woods and fields to watch for the birds and the coming of the spring flowers. And there's nothing in all his week, Junior's mother says, that Junior looks forward to so much as this walk with his father—no, not even his plate of ice cream at Sunday dinner or the box of candy he is apt to find in Dad's pocket of a Sunday night.

Mothers and Fathers—if there is one pleasure in life that you simply can't afford to miss, it's this--the joy of making your little sons and daughters acquainted with the wonders of the great realms of woods and fields, teaching them the lore of birds and flowers and trees, training them to make the most of this healthiest, most desirable interest a boy or girl can have.

This little boy of whom I write, had a big book of pictures given him for Christmas. There are over a hundred plates in the book, and yet he can name most of them readily and recognizes many in the woods and fields.

Think of the pleasure and profit he is going to get out of this knowledge. Some day when other boys have nothing better to do than loaf on street corners or attend cheap shows, this boy will find more pleasure in tramping through the woods, watching for his feathered friends, imitating their calls and hunting for the rare wild flowers in secret haunts that he knows of.

Just now, especially, when the outdoor world is a land of feasingting approximation.

"Whether we look or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur or see it glisten;
When every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within that reaches and towers,
And groping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers,
When the cowslip startles in meadows green,
The buttercup catches the sun in her chalice,
And there's never a leaf or a blade too mean
To be some happy creature's palace—".

surely this is the time when you ought to take your children out into the woods and fields with you and teach them some of the secret pass words, some of the signs and wonders of this awakening of the world.

You do not feel that you know very much about all these things yourself?

Never mind. That only means that when you and your particular "junior" wander through the woods and fields together two shall be learning things for the first time, instead of one.

Mayor Frink presided at the meeting and there were present the full board of aldermen, with the rocorder and H. A. Powell, K. C., W. E. Foster, C. H. Easson and P. W. Thomson, representing the application.

The power bill was discussed from every view point and practically every member took part in the discussion. When Ald.
