BRINTON'S PIPE DREAM
By STODDARD GOODHUE

"I'll do it! By Jove, I'll do it!" Brinton spoke the words slowly and with insistent emphasis; he repeated them still more insistently.

"I will, by Jove!" he said a third time, drawing the words out in a manner peculiar to him with none of that declamatory fervor with which persons of craving power are wont to fortify their resolutions. The very softness of voice of the utterance gave assurance or would have given assurance had there been a hearer—that the resolve thus made would not lightly be given up.

There was however, no hearer. Brinton was merely soliloquizing. As he spoke, he regarded with seeming affection the disreputable-looking pipe that he held in his hand; and his eye wandered, just a bit ruefully, to a row of his fellows that decorated the wall beside the mantel. Then he took a puff at the pipe, and leaning back watched the smoke curl up, seeping into it with the far-seeing eye of the day-dreamer.

For perhaps half an hour he sat there looking most of the time at a certain photograph that smiled down at him from its place on the mantel. Then he rose slowly, his face bearing a half-whimsical smile. He stood for some minutes, with folded arms, in front of the row of pipes, regarding them with an expression between amusement and sorrow.

"It's all over between us, my boy," he said presently. "She doesn't like you; and what she likes decides things for you and me. She hasn't exactly said so, you understand," he continued, "but if the matter must be put in exactly the proper light, 'No, you and me, that is, she and I, have a hint in this letter I have here'—tapping his pocket—that shows how she really feels about it, and hints go, do you understand?"

"The parties addressed said nothing," Brinton gave them full time to offer any comment or suggestion. He saw that they were all silent, and he said, "I might think appropriate, but they appeared to think it useless to argue a case with a man, in that frame of mind."

"Nothing to say, eh?" he queried suddenly. "All right, well, consider it settled. All is over between us, after this year of companionship. All is over; or will be ere long. You're welcome to stay right there in your old place, but I'm going to break you of that vice tobacco habit. It's bad for you and me, that is, she and I, have a long time to live. See how it blackens your face, and scents your breath—Brinton gave them full time to offer any comment or suggestion. AMUSEMENTS.
DON'T MISS THIS—MYRLE-HARDER CO. ALL NEXT WEEK AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

The announcement that Manager Anderson, of the Opera House, has booked the Myrle-Harder Company for a week's engagement at popular prices, has caused much favorable comment by the patrons of this house. This attraction comes heralded and critiqued as among the strongest and most thoroughly equipped repertoires shown on the road today. Social economy that was built and painted at the Arboret scenic studio, which is now owned by Manager W. H. Harder, of this company, is carried for each and every production, and no bill will be presented without these attractive and special features.

A strong line of vaudeville specialties will be given between the attraction for a feature of this kind. Miss Emma Myrle heads this attraction. She is a young and pretty actress of marked ability, charming personality, and degree of magnetism that wins her audience for her at the start. Miss Myrle will be seen in a strong line of parts, and Mr. Harder has gathered about her a supporting company many competent actors and actresses who have won individual success. The repertoire of this company consists of some very heavy plays—productions that made New York sit up and take notice. The original version as used in the Metropolitan productions will be seen in this city, and the same careful detail to staging and other effects will be given during the company's engagement in this city.

THE "STAR" OCEAN MYSTERY A HIT.

Over in the new North End Theatre, The Star, last evening the crowds were regaled with a lovely line of new motion pictures, of which "Found Driftings" was the leading feature. Besides this film there were five others, a happy commingling of pure comedy and unseasonal drama, it was a show entirely different from any seen elsewhere, a point which not only the North End and Carleton and Fairville people are finding out, but city folks as well. The matinee at the Star is getting bigger each day.

WILLIAMS AND ROSE PRESENT A NEW ACT TODAY.

Christmas Eve is the name of the new act to be presented by Williams and Rose at the Princess today, and it is a scream; there is not one dull moment; everything is action from the rise to the fall of the curtain. There are also fine first class pictures and a new illustrated song by Mrs. As. Tux, making the complete best show in town. Bargain matinee every day at 2:15. Evening, 7:15. Be early.

MR. KILCOYNE AT THE OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT.

As announced, a grand production of the musical opera, "The Tale of Spies," will be given at the Opera House, tonight, Friday and Saturday, matinee and evening, at motion picture prices. Seventeen people in the cast. A feature of the evening will be a bass solo by Mr. Kilcoyne of the Unique.

THE FAREWELL OPERA HOUSE PERFORMANCES.

Beginning tonight and for the remainder of the week, an elaborate presentation of the musical opera, "The Tale of Spies," will be given at the Opera House, under the direction of Mr. Frank Stanton. The cast of seventeen people will include Mr. Carter Cast, of the McLaughlin Company, and Mr. A. McCusker, the well-known local amateur. This comedy sketch will occupy over thirty minutes of the regular motion picture programme which will take over an hour in all. A feature of the evening will be the appearance of Mr. Kilcoyne, of the Unique, singing a bass solo, "Asleep in the Deep."

MR. KILCOYNE IN A CHANGE OF SONG AT THE UNIQUE TONIGHT.

Apart from a repetition of the splendid picture programme offered at the Unique yesterday there will be a change of song by Mr. Kilcoyne. That excellent singer will be heard in a new number entitled "The Chink of the Xiser's Gold," a splendid ringing ballad song, which will display his rich voice to even better advantage than the first selection.

Look out for a great feature programme for the week end.

WON'T GET SUNDAY CARS WITHOUT MAJORITY VOTE

TORONTO, Mar. 11.—Premier Whitney made the deposition of Sabbath observance men today that in the petition for Sunday street cars the question for the legislature and government is whether London with a population of 50,000 should have Sunday cars on a vote of the people. "And I may say that neither London nor any other place will get Sunday cars without a vote of the people, and it will not be a past vote but a future one." The deposition went away happy.
