LOCAL NAVIES.

A plea for "local navies" appears in the Times extracted from a "pamphlet" which deals with the situation in 1909 when, it is maintained, the policy of local navies completely triumphed over the principle of contribution. An effort is made to show that the Admiralty then endorsed the principle of Dominion navies, and that which Mr. Borden and Mr. Churchill devised was a complete reversal of that policy. It is significant that the Times in its comment omits any reference to the important proposals which the Admiralty made in 1909. It was suggested at the Defence Conference that an Imperial Pacific fleet should be established that Canada and Australia should each provide one fleet unit; that Great Britain and New Zealand should join in providing a third fleet unit, New Zealand paying for a battle cruiser, and that Great Britain should provide a fourth unit. Australia and New Zealand accepted this proposition.

The Canadian ministers, representing Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the conference, refused it. The Admiralty's plan was too expensive for Canada. As a result of this obstruction the Admiralty's proposal for an Imperial Pacific fleet never materialized. Australia went on with her unit; New Zealand ordered her battle cruiser; Canada did nothing in the two years which followed except purchase the Niobe and Rainbow, which were all the late Government had on exhibition as a Canadian navy when they went out of power.

In face of this deliberate refusal to do what Australia has done, it is ridiculous to hold the Commonwealth up, as Liberal organs are doing, as a shining example for Canada. The Imperial Pacific fleet having failed to materialize, Australia has gone on building a fleet of her own. Her position is wholly different to that of Canada. Australia is in the Antipodes at an enormous distance from the Imperial naval base. The isolated position of the Commonwealth has led the people to accept the principle of universal and compulsory military training and service. It is, therefore, quite reasonable that she should demand, in addition to that, protection for her coasts, providing it out of her own revenues after the British squadron was withdrawn to concentrate the strength of the navy in home waters.

Canada does not have to face these problems. Her Atlantic coast is within a comparatively short distance of the Imperial naval base in home waters. Any possible danger which could arise would be in the North Sea or in the Mediterranean. It was at Gibraltar that the Admiralty proposed that the Imperial Squadron, including the three Canadian battle-ships, should be based. This squadron based on Gibraltar, as Mr. Churchill stated, "could easily reach any point of the British Empire in a shorter time than any European force of equal power could move." The only way possible to protect the Canadian trade routes is to assist in maintaining the dominant power of the British navy. In this connection it should not be forgotten that the proposals of Mr. Borden, which were endorsed by the Admiralty, are not inconsistent with the development of a Canadian unit of the British fleet, should the Canadian people, as Mr. Borden has stated, desire at any time in the future to establish it.

PULPWOOD IN CANADA.

In a recent bulletin, Mr. R. G. Lewis of the forestry branch of the Department of the Interior, reports on the pulpwood manufactured in Canada during the calendar year 1912, and on the quantity exported from and imported into the country. From the figures cited, it appears that the pulpwood consumption for that year increased by 28.8 per cent. over 1911, and in the value of 20.2 per cent. in spite of the reduction of 43 cents per cord in the average price of raw material.

Quebec, Ontario and New Brunswick, in the order named, still lead the provinces, but British Columbia is rapidly gaining, and has displaced Nova Scotia on the list. Ontario alone showed a decrease in consumption, amounting to 18.6 per cent., and Quebec increased by 48.3 per cent. Nova Scotia by 17.8 per cent., and New Brunswick by 15.6 per cent. British Columbia's total of 35,607 cords, half spruce and half hemlock, was practically all increase.

Spruce remains the leading wood, but its percentage of increase 28.8 is exceeded by balsam fir with 40.3 per cent., and by hemlock with over 10,000 per cent. This last is accounted for by the larger use of hemlock in British Columbia. Other woods are practically negligible quantities. Over half the pulpwood consumed was used in the mechanical process for making

DIARY OF EVENTS

HISTORIC DAYS IN CANADA

THE REBELLION OF 1837.

William Lyon Mackenzie, the leader in Upper Canada of the rebellion of 1837, published his "Reformer's Declaration of Rights" seventy-six years ago today. This remarkable document, which was first printed in Mackenzie's paper, The Constitution, was based upon the American Declaration of Independence, but was much more violent and less dignified in tone. It denounced the "baneful domination" of England, and asserted that the form of government imposed on Canada was but a "puppet show" under which the people of the country "have been insulted, injured, and brought to the brink of ruin."

While many Liberals denounced Mackenzie and his "declaration," the fiery journalist gained a number of adherents during the following months. In addition to his journalistic labors, he addressed over 300 meetings and armed and drilled some 1,500 volunteers. By his reputation of British allegiance, and his fervent sympathy with the institutions of the United States, he expressed in his declaration, Mackenzie hoped that large numbers of Americans would rally to his standard. In this respect he was disappointed. When he marched on Toronto, at the head of a thousand armed men with crude guns, pitchforks, axes and other weapons, the defenders of the city had to fire but one volley to scatter the "rebels." Mackenzie escaped to a "vinty" boat, and fled to Niagara Falls, where he was provisionally released, and for a time a guerrilla warfare was carried on.

FIRST THINGS

FOUNDER OF ZIONISM.

The first to advocate the establishment of a modern Jewish state, in Palestine, was Dr. Theodor Herzl, in whose honor memorial meetings will be held today by Zionists throughout the world. The father of political Zionism was a journalist, and until his thirty-fifth year he lived in a non-Jewish atmosphere. It was while acting as Paris correspondent of a Vienna newspaper that he was awakened to a realization of the prejudice that still persisted against even such thoroughgoing Jews as Dr. Herzl. In 1896 Dr. Herzl published his great pamphlet, "A Jewish State," in which he set forth his plan for a Jewish commonwealth. It was proposed in detail as offering the only solution of the problems facing the Jews. That same year he called the first international Zionist convention in Basle, Switzerland, where the movement of political Zionism, which now has its advocates among the Hebrews of all nations, was formally launched.

THE HUMAN PROCESSION

JOSEPH IGNATIUS CLARKE.

Joseph Ignatius Constantine Clarke, who has been chief of the publicity department of the Standard Oil Company since 1906, at a salary of $30,000 a year, has just retired and will hereafter devote his time to agriculture and literature. As a press agent he was one of the most successful. Constantine Clarke sold his birthmark for a mess of pottage, but as poet and playwright and journalist he has few equals. The immortal author of "Kelly and Burke and Shea," "Mr. Clarke was born in Kingston, in the Emerald Isle, sixty-seven years ago today, and came to America in youth. At twenty-four he joined the editorial staff of the New York Herald, and was afterward managing editor of the New York Journal and Sunday editor of the Herald. During that period, before his gifted pen was turned to the commercial uses of Standard Oil, he wrote many plays and volumes of verse, including "Heartsease," "For Bonnie Prince Charlie," "Lady Godiva," and "The Pink Violin." "Kelly and Burke and Shea" is the poem, "Kelly and Burke and Shea," the verses were inspired by the blowing up of the Maine. Looking over the list of the dead, Mr. Clarke remarked, "Yes, they are all here—Kelly and Burke and Shea—and within a few hours the fighting qualities of the Irish are immortalized."

REV. DR. ROBERT MACARTHUR.

The Rev. Dr. Robert MacArthur, head of the World's Baptist Alliance, was born at Daleville, Quebec, Canada, seventy-two years ago today. He was ordained in the Baptist ministry in 1876, after graduating from the University of Rochester and Rochester Theological Seminary, and for forty-one years was pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in New York. In 1911 he resigned that charge to go to the Tabernacle Baptist Church in Atlanta, but left the southern city early this year to devote his entire time to international work. Dr. MacArthur is the author of more than a score of religious books which have been widely read by Baptists all over the world.

THE PASSING DAY

FESTIVAL OF ST. IGNATIUS.

Today will be celebrated the feast of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Order of the Jesuits. He was born at Loyola, Spain, in 1491, and was a courtier and soldier until his thirtieth year. Wounded in battle, he turned his thoughts from worldly ambitions to religion, and in 1539 he laid before a chosen band of associates the plan of a new order, whose members, besides taking upon themselves the vows of obedience, poverty, and chastity, also bound themselves to go on missions to the heathen. In 1540 the order was confirmed by Pope Paul III., and immediately began the work that has girded the globe with a trail of heroic endeavor. Besides their missionary work, they established colleges in many lands, and among their students were Descartes, Corneille, Bossuet, and—irony of fate—Voltaire. Today's celebration of the festival of Ignatius is the culmination of a solemn triduum, or three days' devotion to the saint.

OPHELIA'S SLATE

IN LIGHTER VEIN

Helen and Mary.
A headline in the London Chronicle says: "Miss Helen Mars Recital." Very reprehensible of Helen; one of those militants, probably. Whereas, consider the young woman mentioned on the card in a Chicago bakeshop: "Mary Jones Rolls every morning." How different! Enjoys herself without interfering with anybody.—Boston Transcript.

Worse Than The First.
"I can't call you by your first name," said the new mistress, "for it is the same as mine—Alice—and might be confusing to my husband. Do you mind if we call you by your last name?"
"Oh, no, indeed ma'am," replied the new maid, "I'm quite used to it."
"Darling."

Ominous.
Mother (after the wedding)—Well, our daughter and her husband are off at last. What's troubling you, John?
Father—I don't quite like that young fellow's parting words. He didn't say "Good-by," he said "Au revoir."

Truth Will Out.
She—If I'd known you'd be such a brute to poor Fido, I'd never have loved a year, has just retired and will hereafter devote his time to agriculture and literature. As a press agent he was one of the most successful. Constantine Clarke sold his birthmark for a mess of pottage, but as poet and playwright and journalist he has few equals. Trouble For Pa.
"Ma," inquired Bobby, "hasn't pa a queer idea of heaven?"
"Why do you ask that?"
"Cause I heard him tell Mr. Naylor that he'd like to go to heaven. He said he'd like to go to heaven to him."

Possibly.
Blanche—I can't imagine how I got this lay fever.
Marie—Perhaps it was from using that straw-color hair dye.

HON. J. D. HAZEN INVESTIGATES THE FISHERIES

Minister of Marine, in Vancouver, will Thoroughly into Que.—Treaty with U.S.

Vancouver News-Advertiser, J. Hon. J. D. Hazen, minister of marine and fisheries, arrived here yesterday at 1 o'clock and left for Victoria the afternoon boat. He will remain in the capital until Monday, during which time he will officiate at the annual battle-ship New Zealand on the Canadian government. He is accompanied by Mrs. Hazen and daughter, G. J. Desbarats, minister of naval affairs; Thorne, a prominent citizen of St. John, N. B., and by his secretary, Hildman.

On his return to this city on Monday he will remain here for a few days and will then leave for Prince Rupert and Dawson, accompanied by Clements, M. P. for Comox-Alberni, who is expected to leave for Victoria last evening. Hazen is expected to discuss the details of the trip. On their return from the north Mr. Hazen will remain here for a week, during that time he will address a public meeting and probably a meeting of the Conservative Association.

Purpose of Visit.
The general purpose of my visit to the coast," he informed a representative of the News-Advertiser, "is to familiarize myself with the conditions here. Many questions of settlement pertaining to the fisheries department, and one is in a position to discuss them in the light of the territory and the fisheries. While in Victoria I expect to meet a number of representatives of the local government."

He said he was in favor of the policy of the British Columbia government in encouraging the development of white fishermen, and he was everything in his power to the development of that policy. He also referred to the fisheries treaty entered into between Canada and the United States a few years ago, and said that he was in favor of the treaty. He said that the treaty was a very important one, and that it was a very important one. He said that the treaty was a very important one, and that it was a very important one. He said that the treaty was a very important one, and that it was a very important one.

IN THE COURTS

King's Bench Division
Hearing was had before Mr. Justice White yesterday morning in the case of William L. MacCrackin v. B. Smith, a suit brought by $18,527, a balance alleged to be due for work and labor done in hauling and taking lumber from the defendant at the request of the plaintiff. The defence is that the logs were not of proper quality and others were worth less. The case was examined by the jury.

At the afternoon session of the court the defendant was examined by the jury. The case will be resumed tomorrow at ten o'clock. G. H. appears for the plaintiff and M. Baxter, K. C., and E. P. for the defendant.
