THE SITUATION

The mutiny of sailors on German war ships cannot be regarded as otherwise than deeply significant. In addition, there is the further fact that marines, when so ordered, refused to fire on them. The trouble was suppressed, but without much doubt the smouldering feeling is still there, and probably also in Germany. The men of the Kaiser's land and sea forces are kept under with an iron hand, and it may be taken for granted that isolated manifestations of discontent will be speedily put down, but if a general feeling in the same regard ever becomes manifest, then it will be good-bye to Prussianism. The German Minister of Marine asserts that it is the Russian revolution which "turned the heads" of the demonstrators. If so, and it does the same more generally, that uprising may prove to be a blessing in disguise after all. And the irony of the whole thing is that Germany has herself had a large part in stirring up the Muscovites.

Powerful Teuton counter-attacks and the difficulty of "digging in" operations in the terrible mud, have caused the British to fall back slightly on small portions of the Flanders front, but otherwise they are successfully meeting all attacks and consolidating the ground recently taken.

The official report for last week of British vessels sunk by submarines, shows a slight increase. Kerensky would seem to be getting matters somewhat more in hand once more, and he and some of his associates are on a visit to the front to further explain the state of affairs to the soldiers.

The Yorkshire Post is authority for the statement that if Canada is to get a full share of future war orders, she must be prepared to finance them. This is another added lesson for the people who have money to invest, to devote the same to war issues.

THE U. S. AWAKENING

The disclosures still continue with reference to the sinister and outrageous manner in which the Teuton outfit played Uncle Sam while professing friendship to that country. The German ambassador was at the head of the precious gang of cut throats and traitors, and our neighbors were gulled and bamboozled right up to the eyes. In this regard the Chicago Tribune plaintively remarks:—

"It is difficult for a disclosure of German intrigue in the United States to cause a genuine shock of astonishment any more. We may be astonished by our own ingenuousness than anything else. American comprehension seemed incapable of taking in facts and probabilities."

Even the Lusitania incident failed to make many Americans realize the true nature of the Hun, but the long overdue awakening at last arrived, and with it a highly concentrated determination to take a full share on behalf of throttling the power which impudently started in to place the whole world in bondage.

The Boston Transcript, while regretting the tardiness of American help, goes on to say:—

"For the Kaiser's campaign of frightfulness there can be no atonement. For our culpable laxity there can and we venture to hope there will be atonement in a firm and resolute though belated campaign against every enemy of the republic whether he call himself German or Pacificist, or I.W.W., or what not else. Germany struck a blow of frightfulness at the beginning of the war. We shall strike a blow of prudence and of justice when the war is far advanced. And it may well be that, to adapt an old saying, he strikes best who strikes last, provided he strikes in time."

It is in this spirit that Uncle Sam is now girding on his armor, and even the most critical will agree that he has entered the arena with characteristic energy. His money for the Allies has already talked to some purpose. His men, his aeroplanes, and so on will not be of striking value for some time, but in the long run they also will prove of great service on behalf of the final decision which must and will be attained.

Perhaps Mack Bennett believes in evolution, or maybe he just approves of the use of the law of contrast. Anyhow, in several of his newest Paramount comedies he illustrates certain advance ideas by dressing the men in skirts and the girls—well, wait till you see them!

LIBERAL ORGANS AND COALITION.

For a lengthy period most of the Liberal papers in Canada made a loud outcry on behalf of the need for a coalition government during this war period. Premier Borden made such an offer to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and was turned down. Then he proceeded to open negotiations with other Liberals and now a great many of the self same grit sheets which were clamoring for a Fusion ministry are seeking to belittle the men whose names are mentioned for inclusion. "Sound choices" is the manner in which the Toronto Globe correspondent at Ottawa speaks of them and other papers of same stripe speak of "Turn Coats" and "Nominal Liberals."

As the Hamilton Herald (Independent) remarks "The conviction deepens that on the part of these newspapers malcontents there was never a genuine desire for union government, but that the demand was made for it for no other purpose than to hamper and worry Borden."

Meanwhile the Western Liberals are still holding out. What they evidently want is not a "win-the-war" government, but one in which they shall have the say so with regard to Tariff changes and a lot of other things with reference to Western demands and to the mischief with the rest of the Dominion.

Through it all Borden persists in the course which he has mapped out and in these endeavors he has the sincere endorsement of the men and the women who are not utterly blinded by party.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Y. M. C. A.—You May Come Across and should if you can.

The leaves of * are evidently working among the German forces.

The scarcity of coal still continues which is cold comfort for those desiring comfort.

The tolls are off the Paris road and their existence should be tolled altogether.

Rev. Mr. Gordon (Ralph Connor) says that he was deeply disappointed on returning to Canada from the front to find that a union government had not been formed in Canada. And the great stumbling block in this regard has been Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

AVIATOR KILLED.

By Courier Leased Wire. Detroit, Oct. 11.—Don McGee, of Saginaw, Mich., a civilian instructor at Selfridge aviation field near Mount Clemens, lost his life in Lake St. Clair yesterday when his airplane plunged into the lake from a height of 3,000 feet. McGee attempted a nose dive, but his machine failed to right itself and plunged in nose first.

VOTE DEFEATED

Amsterdam, Oct. 11.—A despatch from Berlin says a motion made by the Independent Socialists in the Reichstag censuring the government and expressing the view that the treatment of the party's interpellation concerning propaganda in the army did not meet with the views of the Reichstag, met with defeat, the Social Democratic parties alone voting for it.

TO CLOSE FOR WAR

By Courier Leased Wire. San Francisco, Oct. 11.—Alaska's placer mines, when they close down for the winter, will not re-open until after the war unless operating expenses are reduced, according to a statement received to-day by F. S. Hamill, mining man from the City of Alaska, who is on his way east to confer with financiers on the situation.

Hamill said placer mining in Alaska at present promises no profit. He laid the cause of this to shortage of labor, increased cost of all supplies and the 8 hour labor law.

CHILD'S ROMPERS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The playtime hours of childhood should be unhampered by such things as fussy clothes, and common sense tells us that a pair of rompers is by far the most comfortable and practical garb that children can wear. The ones shown in No. 8427 are cut with kimono sleeves and there is a tucked over each shoulder to give fullness. Long sleeves gathered into narrow cuffs or simple elbow sleeves may be used. The lower section of the back is left open for a short distance at each side seam, and a belt buttons at each side of the front over the pockets. The children's rompers, No. 8427, are cut in sizes 1, 2 and 3 years. The 2 year size requires 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material, with 1/4 yard of 32 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain this pattern send ten cents to the office of this publication.

PARIS LAD IS LAID TO REST

Funeral of Master William Cavan Took Place This Afternoon

WOMEN'S MISSION MET

Paris Bible Society To Launch Its Annual Campaign For Funds

Paris, Oct. 11.—(From our own correspondent.)—The funeral of Master William Cavan, who passed away at his parents residence in Detroit on Monday, took place this afternoon from the residence of his uncle, Mr. David Cavan, Oak Bank Farm, Brantford Township, to the family plot in the Paris cemetery. The Rev. J. C. Nicholson conducted the service. Deceased was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cavan, and was born in Paris twelve years ago, but for the past two years had been living in Detroit. He had only been ill a few days with pneumonia, and many friends in town will regret to hear of his early demise. Besides his grief-stricken parents, he leaves three brothers, James, John and Orson of Detroit, to whom the sympathy of the community is extended.

The ladies of the Presbyterian Church held their annual missionary meeting yesterday afternoon. The president, Mrs. McCosh was in the chair, and introduced Mrs. Hurd of Brantford to the ladies, who gave a most inspiring address on "Mission Work," which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Miss Stella Beggs favored with a solo, and Miss Young read a very interesting paper on "A Soldier's Thoughts on Foreign Missions." Mrs. Moss presided at the piano.

The thank offering amounted to $50.00. Rev. J. C. Nicholson closed with prayer, and before leaving a hearty repast was served. This evening Mr. John Penman president of the Paris Bible Society is entertaining the officers and lecturers at his home before starting out on their annual campaign for funds. Last year Paris people repaid nobly and the Society are hoping that a liberal contribution will be able to carry on their good work. The following collectors have been appointed:

For sometime past boys riding bicycles seem to have gotten into the habit of frequently leaving a go of the handle bars. The other evening a lad named Bert Tucker while riding down River street, either lost go of the handle bars or was holding them very loosely, when the front wheel struck a stone throwing Tucker head first into the road. He was found lying on his back, unconscious. Medical aid was obtained and he was taken home. The right side of his head and face were badly bruised and he seemed to be suffering from concussion.

We understand that Mr. Lavell of the Walker press, has been notified to report at Montreal. The same is said to be in connection with military service.

Miss B. Kay is visiting with relatives in Hamilton.

Miss M. Small of St. Louis, Mo., who has been visiting Miss Featherstone, left for Toronto yesterday.

Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Purton of Detroit, are the guests of Mrs. Lovett.

Miss Gertrude Armitage of Toronto has been holidaying with her friend, Miss "Kitty" Adamson.

THE PROMISE

By Frederick Bontell.

A Vivid War Story From the French, Which Contains All the Elements of a Tabloid War Drama.

(The New York Tribune prints this beautiful story by Frederick Bontell. It appeared recently in Le Journal of Paris. The translation is by William L. McPherson. Mr. Bontell has, in a high degree, the art of illuminating little incidents and situations—or filling them with a meaning larger than themselves. The emotional reactions which war inspires on a grand scale are in "The Promise" in miniature. The abnegation of death and the passionate appeal of life and love—these are the two motives whose contrasts dominate every war tragedy.)

The afternoon was wearing on. The three stories of the forest as the soldier who was following the wooded path debouched into a large clearing. He recognized this place once, remembering the description of it which had been given to him. He saw the house, which he had covered roof the house, which he was seeking. In haste he crossed the clearing and, as the first drops of rain pattered themselves in the dust of the path, he knocked at the door, which was promptly opened.

"Papa is not here; he has gone to town," answered a fresh voice. "But if you wish to see his assistant, he lives only a little distance away."

A young girl had appeared on the doorstep, followed by a huge dog, who growled and whom she told to keep quiet. She seemed to be about sixteen or seventeen years old. In her gray cloth dress she looked tall and well developed. Her clear face showed lines that were still childish; but her eyes were serious, calm, serene. With her hand she brushed from her brow some unruly strands of chestnut hair.

"I wanted to speak first to M. Marry," the soldier stammered. On seeing her he had recoiled involuntarily, and she now gazed at him with astonishment, for he was not a soldier, but a young man, and that didn't go well with his great height, his vigorous features and his frank and open expression.

"If I could come back again," he murmured. "But that is impossible. I must take my train this evening. She said softly that they did interest her. Then the soldier, after a little hesitation, ventured another question.

"Have you a fiancé down there?" She shook her head and her face reddened. They stood there silent, both under the spell of vague feeling of tenderness, which was mingled the sadness of mourning, evoked by the poor souvenirs which lay on the table between them. The soldier thought confusedly of the death which he had so narrowly escaped, and he had an imperious desire to live and to love, the image in which that desire flowered being that of a budding young girl with chestnut hair. But he did not dare to put his thoughts into words. He merely said:

"I must go. But I should like to ask of you a favor before I go. Will you allow me to tell a comrade, if anything happens to me, to send you some things which I shall leave behind? That will not displease you?"

She looked at him, her gray eyes filled with pity and emotion, and, trembling a little, answered: "You will come back—I am sure you will come back."

Hesitating to read the true meaning of her look and tone, he said very softly: "I shall come back—here?"

She nodded assent. He took her hand, bent across the table on which the little package lay and awkwardly kissed her on the forehead. Then he went away in the dusk, following the path through the woods which smelt of verdure and freshly moistened earth.
