summer without a black lace gown, made up over either black or colored surah, red, yellow or lavender. The black, however, enlivened with fine jet trimming, is pronounced by popular favor to be in better taste. The chantilla and Spanish net are used more than any other laces for this purpose, but there is a general ransacking through old trunks for the half-forgotten Llama flounces, shawls, parasol covers, fichus and mantillas of their mothers and grandmothers by the girls, and all of these resurrected treasures are made to do duty in the constructions of those handsome costumes, sometimes every piece of old family lace being skilfully combined in one gown. The style of these lace dresses depends largely upon the draping, and it is well for those making their own costumes to call in the aid of some modiste to do this part of the work for them, or they will be apt to feel discontented with the general effect of the dress when finished. It needs the practiced touch of a professional to give it the proper style. One black gown is worth three others in the point of usefulness as it were, and carrying off captive most of the eligible titles, and they attribute his success in the matrimonial way to a superior talent Americans have for intrigue. American maids and widows have figured so largely in society, in the newspapers and in romance in England and France of late years, that they have grown to be looked upon with a ves, lealous eye by the women of those countrie, who cordially hate what they term their bold elever tricks and their loud manners.

It would be difficult to find a stronger combination of first-class companies than those represented by Mediand & Jones, at S' Adelaide street cast, vit. The Norwich Union Fire Inc. and National Insurance Company of Edinburgh and the Accident Insurance Company of North America—the well-knews Canadian accident company. **Zhi ** Do you remember the story of the Iad Hans in Luck,' who, after having served his master seven years, was given as his wage a piece of silver as big as his head! He went away, canyring is along the road, and found is very heavy. Presently a man rode up on a capital horse.

**Ah'-said Hans, aloud, what a fine thing to ride a horse, instead of to be weighed down under a load of silver.

**When the rider heard that, he drew rein and asked Hans if he would exchange the lump of silver for the horse? The lad agreed, gave up the metal and mounted the saddle. But Hans did not understand how to sit on a horse, and he was soon after thrown, hear where a man was tending a cow. Then, disgusted with his horse, he exchanged the horse for the cow, after a while he grew tired of driving the cow, and exchanged her for a pig. Then he changed the pig for a goose, and then the goose for a grandingstone, which, when he was stopping at a pond to drink, rolled into the water and was lost. Thus he had foolishly wasted all the wages he had received."

A most remarkable case of identification is to hand in Toronto. A gentleman returning home from business was refused admittance by his wife to his home. A simple explanation will show the reason. He had just donned a new summer suit, and it improved his general appearance so much that even his "own wife" clan't know him. Coulter & Gibson, the tailors, 249 Yonge street, surprise every one with their mobby suits.
