

vais at this institution," writes another, "is quite wonderful; and now there are several schools throughout the country which look to the Hagenot Seminary as their mother, and work on the same principles." The most prominent feature in the whole education is the paramount importance attached to Christian missions.

While maintaining this oversight of his flock and the Christian schools of the province, Mr. Murray is as much as ever bent on the carrying forward of evangelization. In this direction he has had marvellous blessing. After his work at Wellington became known, no one was in greater request for taking part in special services in other congregations throughout the country. Often he has found many souls just waiting to be brought into the Kingdom, and has given the message that led them to Christ. With such plain indications of the finger of God before him, it is little to be wondered at that Mr. Murray should have been led to think that he ought to have the work of an evangelist occupying the larger portion of his time. The way for this was not at first plain. A prolonged illness in 1879, for one thing, interrupted this service. But after granting him a remarkable recovery from it, the Lord was pleased also to show his congregation that this line of effort was to bulk very largely in his future work. He came in great power and blessing to the people. There was an ingathering of souls such as they had never experienced before; and then the Church was made willing and ready to allow their pastor to devote at least half his time to evangelistic work. In the prosecution of this service during the last six years Mr. Murray has found the Lord making manifest the savor of His knowledge by him in almost every place he has visited. His tours on special missions have of late extended not only to the Eastern Province of the Colony, but also to the Free State, Transvaal, and Natal. And we are informed that there are hardly any congregations in those different States where there are not found those who now look up to him as their spiritual father; and who have been helped by his preaching on their way Zionward.

Mr. Murray has also established at Wellington a training seminary for missionaries to the Kaffirs and
