

servant in that portion of the vineyard to which he has appointed him, and for which he was consecrated.

In February, 1875, His Lordship bent his steps to Muskoka. Everyone knows what a wild winter it was, and the Bishop was seriously ill a part of the time while on his travels; nevertheless, he managed to hold an Ordination at Bracebridge on the 17th February, when three Deacons were admitted to the Priesthood and one candidate received into the Diaconate. During this tour services were held at Rosseau, a lay-reader was duly licensed and appointed to assist the Incumbent of the Bracebridge Mission, and 18 persons were confirmed at Port Sydney.

On leaving Muskoka, the Bishop travelled eastward to do in Ontario, Montreal, and Quebec, as he had done in Huron and Toronto. He also pursued his journeys as far as the distant Dioceses of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and, returning, looked in upon the newly formed Diocese of Niagara.

Late in July, the Bishop after visiting and holding Confirmations in Parry Sound and Manitoulin Island, arrived in his "Cathedral City," Sault Ste. Marie; and on the 2nd of August, in company with the Bishop of Huron, opened the Shingwauk Home. Since then he has visited Prince Arthur's Landing, Neepigon, Michipocoton, Batchewauning, and other places on the North Shore, and on the 8th November, the ground already covered with snow, left for southern parts to renew his winter "begging campaign."

The Bishop's residence has been erected this summer at the sole cost of a lady in England, on four acres of land donated by Wemyss Simpson, Esq. It will be ready for occupation next spring.
