Hamilton House Holstein Herd Sires

Our highest record bull for sale at present is a 4 months calf from Lulu Darkness 30.33 lbs. and sired by a son of Lulu Keyes 36.56 lbs. His two nearest dams therefore average 33.44 lbs. and both have over 100 lbs. of milk per day. We have several older bulls by the same sire and from two and three-year-old heifers with records up to 27.24 lbs. All are priced to sell.

HOLSTEIN HERD AVERAGES 18,812 LBS. MILK

A herd of 13 pure-bred Holsteins last year averaged 18,812 lbs. milk and 638.57 lbs. fat. Do you realize the money there is in such cows? It is estimated that the average annual yield of all cows in this country is under 4,000 lbs. These 13 cows produce as much milk as 62 cows of the 4,000-lb. class.

Why feed, milk and shelter any more cows than you need to produce the milk you require? If interested in HOLSTEIN CATTLE send for booklets—valuable information.

A herd sire of our breeding will improve your herd. We have sons of our present sire, Pontiac Korndyke of Het Loo (sire of $12,750 Het Loo Pieterje), and also sons of our former sire, Avondale Pontiac Echo. Several of these are of serviceable age, and all are from good record dams. Quality considered, our prices are lower than anywhere else on the continent. Their youngsters should not remain long. Write to-day.

Our Country's Call.

Continued from page 2228 of Christmas Number. Upon second thought there seemed to be much unconscious irony in that announcement. "Welcome home, boys, to help pay for this depot which is being built by high-priced labor working at nineteen per cent. efficiency."

Last spring it was my privilege to observe frequently a shepherd caring for his flock. It was lambing time. A ewe had died, leaving a lamb to the tender mercies of the shepherd. He had taken the lamb to his house, and warmed it by the fire, and fed it milk from a nursing-bottle. Another ewe had lost her lamb and the shepherd was trying to induce her to adopt the motherless waif. The lamb would leave the foster-mother when the shepherd was in the pen and follow him all about, tottering on its long wobbly legs.

Next day the adoption was accomplished fact and it was hard to say which was the happiest, the lamb, the foster-mother, or the shepherd. During this whole time, the shepherd seemed to take no note of the eight-hour or ten-hour schedule, for the lambs had a most inconvenient way of appearing upon the scene at any hour of the day or night. Faithfulness and tenderness. "He shall lead his flock like a shepherd. . . . He shall carry the lambs in his bosom."

Curious or thoughtful persons may speculate for themselves upon these two instances, to discover, if possible, reasons for the oppositeness of spirit displayed. There is much, doubtless, in the material upon which the labor was expended. Lambs are lovable things; whereas, a mixture of sand and cement has little power to stir the emotions. But whatever the causes may be, there is no doubt that the spirit in which the shepherd did his work is the spirit for which the country calls. It is good for the country that men should work in that spirit. It is even better for the workman.

Ruskin in one of his addresses says: "It may be proved with much certainty that God intends no man to live in this world without working, but it seems to be no less evident that He intends every man to be happy in his work. . . . Now in order that people may be happy in their work, these three things are needed; they must be fit for it; they must not do too much of it; and they must have a sense of success in it."

Every citizen fitted for some, useful work! What a revolution in our system of education before that national ideal is attained! What changes in our standards of worth and respectability! Subject to this test, how many occupations in our complex civilization would have to be abandoned as useless or mischievous. We test the integrity and worth of a citizen by the value he places upon his vote, or by his interest and activity in public affairs. Why not measure his value by an even more fundamental test—his contribution to the well-being of the nation through his daily work; his occupation? For such an occupation every boy and girl in the schools must be fitted manually by being trained in some useful handicraft, and mentally by being taught the science underlying that craft, whether agriculture or house-building or home-making; and taught also some elementary principle in economics, social science and civics. They must be taught to scorn drones and parasites in human society. They must be taught that manual labor is the first necessity of human existence; that manual labor intelligently and faithfully performed, is to be honored in principle and admired in practice. And they must be taught that other occupations are to be endured only as they contribute to the well-being of labor; in enlightening it, by education; in brightening it by amusement and recreation; in protecting it by just government; in elevating and ennobling it, through the spiritual ministry. The country's call is answered by men and women who possess the civic conscience. Such people have abandoned self-interest as the main motive, and have adopted the social obligation. And this conversion to a higher motive to be effective must be expressed not in mere benevolent intention, or in philanthropy or works of charity, but in such constant occupation as contributes directly to the material or spiritual welfare of the nation.
