QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

BRITISH COLUMBIA SHINGLES.

Can you, or any of your readers, give me some information in regard to the wearing qualities of British Columbia shingles? How do they compare with the Ontario cedar? There is a difference of about 25c. per square in favor of the B. C. shingles. I am building this season, and would like some light on the subject.

READER.

Ans.—British Columbia cedar shingles are used extensively in the Northwest, and, to some extent, in Ontario, and seem to give the best of satisfaction. We cannot give a positive opinion as to the relative merits of British Columbia and Ontario cedar, but invite the opinion of readers who have had experience with both.

WART ON MARE'S LEG—CEMENT OR WOODEN SILO.

Mare has a large wart on her arm. It has been there for over a year. It is about the size of a hen's egg; always raw, bleeding a little, being irritated by the wagon tongue. I have read with interest the discussion of cement and wood silo. I am thinking of building one in the future, but I am badly located for a cement one. Gravel would have to be shipped in on rail, and there is no cement silo within a day's drive of here that I know of. I think it would be hard to get a contractor to build one here. Which would be best for me under these conditions?

J. L.

Ans.—1. If the wart has a constricted neck, clip it off with shears or sharp knife, and dress the raw surface until healed with: carbolic acid, one part; sweet oil, twenty parts. If the shape of the wart permits, a fine string, or hair, tied tight around the base of the wart, close to the skin, will cause it to soon slough off. If neither of these plans are convenient, apply strong acetic acid to the wart, touching it carefully so as not to bring the acid into contact with the surrounding skin.

2. Having regard to your conditions, we would recommend a stave silo. After you had gained some experience with silos, and had time, perhaps, to procure a supply of stone and gravel at small cost (hauling it in slack times), you might be disposed to build a concrete silo, and use your wooden one, while it lasted, for summer feeding. It is usually a good plan for a man to build his first silo of wood (staves).

POULTRY TUBERCULOSIS.

My chickens have been dying for some time; have been fed corn and barley; have a good henhouse for them. They seem to lose their appetite, droop for a week or ten days; get weak and stupid before they die. On opening them, we find their liver swollen and covered with white spots, extending to the rest of the body, sometimes growths coming out of the eyes before they die.

J. V.

Ans.—I am inclined to believe that these chickens are affected with tuberculosis. The better plan would be to send one of the chickens to the laboratory here. A disease as bad as tuberculosis should not be passed over lightly, and it is certainly worth one's while to find out for sure whether the birds are so affected. If they are, it is very necessary that the sick ones be killed, and I am not sure but what the whole flock would be best killed. Thoroughly disinfect the henhouse, using a five-per-cent. solution of carbolic acid and whitewash all over the buildings and floor, and do it two or three times over. The chickens may have had a combination of canker and tuberculosis as well. When the correspondent soaks of the eyes being affected, I am inclined to think that it is canker, or an advanced stage of roup. In raising chickens next season, the correspondent should be careful to raise the chickens on new ground; i. e., do not keep the coops where they have been kept other seasons, and, if possible, thoroughly disinfect the coops, or build new ones. Take no chances of the disease getting a hold again, and by keeping the birds in clean coops, and starting them on fresh ground, the chances of success are much greater.
