lating invaluable statistics for the guidance of the department in formulating a practical policy for improving the health of children throughout the province.

In the first district hospital in Alberta—that at Lloydminster, organized long before the passing of the Hospital act, fees were abandoned, and the service and accommodation were given free of charge to residents of the district, thus equalizing the cost of illness and reducing it to an insignificant per capita rate per annum. At no time has the tax in that district for hospital purposes amounted to more than $2.00 per quarter section per year. This fine example has had an influence on the province. Under the act, local boards of the districts have the right to impose fees; but the general feeling is that these fees should be very low, if imposed at all, and it is unlikely that the scale will be higher than is required to prevent the exploitation or abuse of hospital privileges. The reduction of the cost is such an indisputable benefit that few other arguments are necessary for the reduction or complete abolition of fees in these districts, tax-supported, public controlled hospitals.

A Dazzling Program

For the next two or three years the greatest achievements which can be looked for will be the building of rural hospitals, sufficient to satisfy the most pressing needs for shelter and medical and nursing service for the sick. But given a complete organization of districts and the completion of this preliminary program of hospital building, the prospect of service which opens before the minister of health is dazzling in its possibilities.

The Hospital of Democracy

To achieve this system of hospitals we must begin at once to devise a new type of hospital. Old ideas of hospital building must be abandoned for a new kind of institution, planned scientifically to meet the needs of each community. In the free public hospital of the future there cannot be any sharp distinction in service, based on wealth and social position, as there now is in our city hospitals. There cannot be three classes of ward grading from the luxurious private room, with its special services, to the overcrowded general ward lacking in graces and comforts of any kind. There must be one class of service, and that of a high standard for all, with decent privacy for each. The service must be designed to meet the need rather than to fit the purse of the patient. There must be the very best service for all maternity cases, and for all children, without any question of the ability of mother or child to pay $5.00 per day or any other fee in advance.

Plans for this hospital must be based on accurate knowledge of the conditions of the district, which can be ascertained by a health survey by properly qualified agents of the government. The vital statistics, if complete, will reveal the average birth rate, which will determine the size of the maternity department. The school inspection will reveal accurately the needs of that portion of the population. The extent of contagious diseases is already known to the health authorities. It will not be difficult to plan judiciously and scientifically to meet every need of each district. To be sure, the district hospital will be limited in its scope. Major surgery, tuberculosis, orthopaedics and some other things cannot be properly treated in the local hospital. Special provincial institutions must be provided for these. The city hospitals for some time to come will serve for surgery and will correspond in the hospital scheme to high schools in the public school scheme. The city hospitals will train the nurses too. But the big provincial surgical hospital, on the plan of the Mayo institution in Minnesota, is the next step. This is to health what the university is to education. And indeed, it may be a close associate of the University in the education of our doctors and nurses. It will be against all reason to charge fees for any of these institutions. They will serve all, although only a small percentage will actually come within their walls. The whole burden of maintenance must be borne by all, not by the few sick who are the least able to bear any share of the burden. To do otherwise would be a complete revocation of democratic principle.
