trees. A woman lay in a crushed heap among the pillows of a divan. Neither had moved for a long time. The little form in the white casket had been their all. Now it lay scarcely stiller than they.

Suddenly the silence was broken by the sound of a woman's voice, high-pitched and clear.

"Willy! Willy! oh, Willy!" it cried. A friend within the house hastened to the door. Along the hallway through the shrubbery a handsomely-dressed woman appeared. "Oh!" she exclaimed, "have you seen a little boy about four years old? My little boy is lost! I cannot find him; and I fear he has fallen somewhere in the sand dunes."

"Have you notified the police?"

"Long ago. They are all on the lookout for him. But he may be buried in the sand. We have been searching for hours. Oh, I have lost two little ones through death, but I never felt as I do this moment!"

"The mother's heart wailed forth behind the cultured woman's enforced composure.

The woman who had been lying among the cushions came through the hall to the door.

"What is it?" she asked.

"The friend put her arm about her and would have drawn her back; but the stranger spoke.

"My little boy is lost," she said, excitedly. "He is only four years old. We are afraid he is among the sand dunes."

"Oh!" cried the young woman, "I am so sorry! Is there nothing we can do? Cannot we help you look for him? The poor little fellow! Think of him all alone in the dunes! How did it happen?" And she put her hands in the stranger's for sympathy.

The latter, with a look of surprise, coming home from a round of calls to find the child missing and the other children seeking him. Even as she spoke, voices could be heard calling from the sand dunes: "Willy! Willy! oh, Willy!"

"I must go!" cried the mother, "Oh, my heart is breaking! Willy! Willy! Where can he be?"

As she turned a basing saphyr blew the white ribbon on the doorstep straight out across her cheek. She started out dismayed.

"Why," she cried, "you have a dead child in this house!"

"Yes," said the other mother; "my only child, a little boy just four years old died this morning."

Tears came into the stranger's eyes.

"Oh," she cried, "do forgive me! I am so sorry. I did not know. Dear heart! to think I should have troubled you. I, too, have lost two children by death; but this is more terrible. My little boy! You see, I do not know where he is."

"I know," the other said, calmly. "We must do what we can for you. Oh, I am sure you will find him. Let me go with you. We will search together. Not to know where your baby is! Ah, what trouble there is in the world!"

She seized a wrap, and the two women went down the walk together. At the corner they were met by a boy of perhaps a dozen years.

"Some people say they met a little boy like yours goin' down toward North Beach," he said.

"They hurried down the hilly street. "Have you seen anything of a little boy, about four years old, playing about here?" asked Willy's mother of a home-bound laborer. "My little boy is lost."

"Shure, mem, now that's very bad an' I'm sorry," the man said, halting. "mebbe he'd be at the p'lice station?"

"No. I've telephoned all the stations. Some one thought they saw him down here. What shall I do?"

The face of the big rough man worked s:mpathetically.

"I'll kape me eyes open ex I go along home, mem," he said; "an' mebbey I'll see th' little fellow. Tut, now! What if 'twere me own little Tim? He's just four years old, the rascal, an' 'twad kill 'is mother, spure. Ah, but it's wearyin' an' comfortin' to th' heart, mem, the children be."

The way grew more aquid as they kept on toward the Beach. On a doorstep a young woman sat holding a little child, and looking anxiously down the street. "Have you seen a little boy?" the older mother began, and again the sad little tale was told.

"No," said the other woman; "but I hope you'll find him, lady. I know how you feel. Me heart's sore over me own little Joey, here, and me man away looking for wurror. The baby is that sick an' Jim, me other lad, he's gone for medicine. I don't know what's keeping him."

"Let me see the baby," and the mother, whose little one lay dead at home, reached out her jeweled hands. The child was placed in her arms.

"Why, he is very ill, indeed!" she exclaimed. The little one's face was livid. The baby's fingers were clenched over each tiny thumb, and the tiny body shivered convulsively.

Willy's mother eyed the little form knowingly. "The child should be put into a warm bath at once," she said.

The three women entered the house and busied themselves over the sick baby. She whose child was lost found a battered kettle and put water to heat over the single-burner lamp. The other ones undressed the little form, while the wee sufferer's mother stood wringing her hands in helpless pain.

They worked rapidly, tenderly, but it was nearly an hour before the terrible convulsions were over and the baby was resting on the bed.

"God bless you, ladies!" the poor woman cried, as she saw relief creeping over the drawn face; "you have saved my baby's life!"

"But, oh, my own little boy!" and her eyes were turned to the door.

"It is quite dark and I do not know where he is."

"Sure, lady, the good God will never let your baby be lost!" but the two strangers were gone.

"Oh, where will he sleep to night?" murmured Willy's mother. "Your boy is safe with God, but where, where is mine?"

Up the street an elder boy came tearing. "Mamma! Mamma! he cried, while yet afar off: "a policeman's found Willy and taken him home!"

"Oh, thank God! said she whose child was with the All Father—"thank God!" but the other could not speak. It was a triumphal progress back to the more aristocratic quarter.

"They've found yer bobby, ma'am," a street urchin cried, who was calling papers on the street corner. A Mexican tangle vender volunteered the same information in broken English, and in the next block a woman threw open a window and leaned forward.

"A policeman took your little boy home, madam!" she said, joyfully.

Near home a gleeful band of children met them.

"He's found—he's found!" and the chorus rang throughout the neighborhood.

The two mothers kissed tenderly and parted. As the younger one turned to enter her childless home her eyes were swimming with the first tears she had shed that day; but they were tears of thankfulness.

On the doorstep of the other home a man stood, holding a child in his arms.

"We've got him," he called, quickly, as he bent to kiss his wife; and then his arms closed tightly around them both.

"Oh, Willy!" he said, "how could you frighten us so? Why did you do it?"

The curly head was raised and the blue eyes opened in surprise.

"Why, papa," said the little voice, "Mary said there wurzzen any oranges for dinner, an' I went out to buy some!"

The Queen's Message to Her People.

A special supplement to the London Gazette publishes the following letter from the Queen to Sir Matthew White Ridley, the home secretary, dated Windsor, July 15th.

"I have frequently expressed my personal feelings to my people, and though on this memorable occasion there have been many official expressions of my deep sense of the unbounded loyalty evidenced, I cannot rest satisfied without personally giving utterance to these sentiments. It is difficult for me on this occasion to say how truly touched and grateful I am for the spontaneous and universal outburst of loyal attachment and real affection experienced on the completion of the sixtieth year of my reign.

"During my progress through London on the 22nd of June, this great enthusiasm was shown in the most striking manner, and can never be effaced from my heart. It is, indeed, deeply gratifying, after so many years of labor and anxiety for the good of my beloved country, to find that my exertions have been appreciated throughout my vast empire. In west and west I have ever had the true sympathy of all my people, which has been warmly reciprocated by myself.

"It has given me unbounded pleasure to see so many of my subjects from all parts of the world assembled, and to find them joining in acclamations of loyal devotion to myself; and I would wish to thank them all from the depth of my grateful heart.

"I shall ever pray God to bless them and to enable me still to discharge my duties for their welfare as long as life lasts."

Let the Little Ones Sleep.

"God giveth His beloved sleep," and little children should have plenty of it. It is the tendency of the times to disregard this necessity, hence the increase of nervous diseases among our young men and women. Sleep means growth with young people, and unless there is much sleep there will be no healthy growth.

Nature teaches a little child to lie down and sleep whenever it is weary, and after a bath or after its mid-day meal, and it is only through artificial influences that a little child leaves the habit of taking a daily nap, and it is generally due to the mother's neglect that it is finally dispensed with. Yet the world often sympathizes with the mother rather than the child when towards night baby grows cross and fretful, while the mother often grows impatient, forgetting the long, tiresome day which the little one has endured. What wonder that these little ones grow up into nervous young men and women with no constitutions to speak of!

Many grown people are pressed for time to accomplish all that they desire, and in their search for gold or daily bread, find little time to rest, yet this is no reason why they should begrudge their children an extra hour's sleep in the morning because they have an inherited idea that it is more healthful for them to rise early, and they fear that if they are allowed to sleep until they naturally awaken, habits of laziness will be formed which will mar their after lives.

A City Man's Mail.

There Are Thousands Like Him in Canada.

"To be candid and truthful, I am miserable, used up, nervous, and can't sleep these days; I feel as if life was not worth living. I have tried country air, and have strictly followed my doctor's advice, yet here I am, fast wearing away."

This confession, made by a resident of one of our largest Canadian cities, truly represents the condition of thousands of men and women, old and young, at this time of the year.

It is almost certain that such weakly and broken-down men and women have not yet heard the joyful news that Paine's Celery Compound is the great life renewer and builder, the medicine that makes the weak strong, that gives vim and true activity to the languid and despondent, that makes the blood pure and red, that gives digestive vigor and sweet refreshing sleep.

Are you, dear reader, amongst the afflicted ones? Are you pining in misery and suffering and full of dread and fear? If so, let us point you to the only medicine that can meet your case without a fear of failure. It is Paine's Celery Compound, nature's medicine for the tired and worn out body and unstrung nerves. The virtues of this medicine strike right at the seat of the trouble, quickly bringing health and happiness. It has a marvellous record of cures, a fast and enduring fame won by rescue and life saving. Will you test its efficacy? You must if you desire health and robustness as well as extended years.

present a fair proportion of their nourishing strength. Oatmeal gruel, especially excellent for invalids, is prepared by adding an ounce of washed meal and a pinch of salt to three pints of water, then boiling down to two pints, straining, allowing it to cool and pouring off the clear liquor. A few raisins added toward the close of the boiling impart an improved flavor. Sugar, lemon juice and oatmeal are sometimes added to improve the flavor. With beef tea oatmeal is of value in the sick room, and the two are combined in this manner: Mix two tablespoonfuls of oatmeal with two of cold water, add to a pint of strong beef tea, boiling; boil six minutes, straining all the time, then strain through a fine sieve and serve hot.

Oatmeal water is prepared by boiling oatmeal in considerable water and straining it. Added to the milk given bottle fed babies, it prevents coagulation of the casein of the milk in large, firm curds, and is also mildly laxative. A little salt should be added to the water while boiling.

The Flight of the Sun.

Astronomers know that the sun, accompanied by the earth and the other planets, is moving toward a point in the northern heavens with great speed. Just what the velocity is however, cannot yet be told with certainty. Prof. Simon Newcomb in a recent lecture said that it was probably between five miles and nine miles per second. The bright star, Alpha Lyrae has not far from the point toward which the sun is moving. Every moment we are getting nearer to the place where the star now is. "When shall we get there? Probably in less than a million years; perhaps in half a million."

Mr. Dunkley—I guess the Howells will be getting right in the swim now.

"Nice dog! Have you taught him any tricks since I was here last?"

"Oh, yes; he will fetch your hat if you whistle," she said, sweetly.
