

THE MORGAN POOL SAVED THE BANKS.

U. S. Secretary Cortelyou Says the Situation is Continually Improving.

Small Banks Fail and Run on Others--Attempt to Steal $9,000.

New York, Oct. 25.—A much calmer tone was apparent in business circles this morning. The success of the relief measures undertaken yesterday by J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller and other prominent financiers, together with the serenity with which the officials of the Trust Company of America met the run of depositors on that institution, gave great encouragement to bankers and business men generally that no further trouble was to be feared. The $25,000,000 made up by a pool, headed by Mr. Morgan, which was sent into the stock market yesterday afternoon, is believed to have given permanent relief to the brokers, who were in need of funds with which to carry the stocks bought and held on margins for their customers. Announcement was made this morning that the United States Exchange Bank, a small institution located in the Harlem district of the city, would not open for business to-day. The bank has only a little more than $300,000 on deposit, but an inconspicuous business and the announcement that it would not open for business was entirely without effect. There were lines of depositors waiting this morning in front of the Trust Co. of America, and at the banking office of the Lincoln Trust Co., up town. Some of those in line at the Trust Co. of America had been there all night. At the head of the line was a woman, who declined to leave her place, even when the man next in line promised to restore it to her this morning. She suffered considerably from the cold night air, and several of the men, touched by her plight went to a nearby restaurant at 3 o'clock in the morning and got some bread and hot coffee for the woman to eat. First advices from London to-day were very encouraging. American stocks there opened at prices from one to four points higher. The stock market opened irregular, Union Pacific was up 1%, Southern Pacific 1%, St. Paul 3/4 higher, and Reading 1/2 higher. The Borough Bank of Brooklyn, a state institution, with a capital stock of $200,000 and deposits of about $3,000,000, did not open for business to-day. This bank has several branches in Brooklyn. Its business was not very large, and no prominent financiers were connected with it. The Lincoln Trust Co. resumed payment to its depositors as usual this morning. The Trust Co. of America also opened for business as usual. The line of de-positors waiting to withdraw money was much smaller than at the same hour yesterday morning. Secretary Cortelyou was at the sub-treasury to-day. He said: "There is nothing to say on the situation now, except to reaffirm my former expressions of belief that matters are steadily improving. Later developments during the day may prompt a further statement." All the members of the New York Stock Exchange made their daily settlements of accounts as usual to-day to the stock exchange clearing house. A reaction followed the opening of the stock market gains, the average level of the market falling to below last night. The fall in prices did not extend far below last night's level before a steady tendency developed. The first prices recorded here, while well above the New York closing of last night, did not approach the high prices established in the London market before operations began here for stocks with an international market. American Smelting started 2% higher here; Union Pacific 2, and Canadian Pacific, B. & O., Norfolk & Western, Delaware & Hudson, 1 1/2 to 1 3/4. This showing was converted into losses running from a fraction to a point in some cases within a few minutes. The International Trust Co., a small trust company, closed its doors at 10:40 a. m. This trust company has a business connection with the Borough Bank of Brooklyn, which suspended payment to-day. The Secretary of the Treasury is counting to give financial assistance in a large way. A statement issued by the sub-treasury to-day shows that local banks gained $22,705,000 from the sub-treasury during the week. This represents in large part the deposits of government funds made with the New York banks. The department is doing everything possible to allay apprehension. The run upon the Trust Company of America, has about spent its force and the officers of the bank have now resources sufficient to meet any demands. It is being rushed to New York from Washington. Another large supply of small bills is being prepared.

TIMES WILL CALL OFF THE GAME

The Times will receive a detailed report of the big football match at Montreal to-morrow over its own leased wire, which will run direct from the scene of the battle into the Times building. The report will be read out from the balcony at the office by an announcer with a loud voice. Immediately after the game a special edition of the Times, giving a full account of the game, will be issued. Drop around about 3 o'clock and hear all about the big game.

EMPRESS OF GERMANY. Latest portrait of Her Majesty in 18th century dress as the wife of the great Frederick II. of Prussia.

The Man In Overalls

There are going to be doings at the Liberal Club soon. Got your membership card yet? With the increase in the cost of booze the increased cost of living will be increased still more. Our new story had an auspicious opening last night. Did you read it? Ald. Anderson seems to have come to the conclusion that it is not all beer and skittles being an alderman. Chief Smith has pointed out twenty-five dark spots in the city that need a light. Did he include the Jolley Cut, or does he consider it out of the city? Hallowe'en will come in quite handsly to celebrate the victory of Thanksgiving Day. Times advertisers edit a large portion of this issue of the paper, and I must admit they do it like professionals. There are both profit and pleasure to be found in their announcements. It's doubtful if Leader Borden has made a single convert in his whole western trip. There's the Market Square. It's about as dark at night as is the cemetery. Over by the market buildings a man might be robbed and murdered and passers by never see a sign of the deed. It was to be expected that the Wil street panic would send some financiers to the wall. Col Gibson's plan will be to throw out Hayhurst, Skedden and a few of the sharpshooters in skirmishing order to pick off the officers of the enemy before driving it into the bay. The boys will need a bath anyway. Now, how many men are there in the city who want to get shaved after 11 p. m? One at a time now. Now let the doctors all get vaccinated first. But what will the Patronage Committee say? Yes, Maude. The merchants' ads. are news, and very interesting news, to the lady readers. You know that. There should be a place in the battle for the veteran firemen. They could discourage the enemy by throwing cold water upon it. But is Mr. Weaver out for good? In the coming sham fight the Gore would be the proper place to shed the gore. If you run to catch a street car nowadays you are expected to run for the Legislature. So far the local Ministerial Association has not raised its voice against this limerick craze. The isolation hospital will be quite handy for the wounded on Thanksgiving Day. FEAR TO GO HOME. EARTHQUAKE SUFFERERS MAY DIE OF EXPOSURE. More Shocks Felt—The Pope Has Sent Money, and Orders Churches Kept Open—Italian Government Sends $20,000,000—Bad Weather. Rome, Oct. 25.—Little additional news was received here this morning from Calabria, which was visited by earth shocks on Oct. 23. The bad weather continues in the south and it is feared that many persons are likely to lose their lives as the result of exposure, fear of a repetition of the earthquakes preventing them from returning to the villages. Many of the homeless people have erected tents or are living under other temporary coverings. A few fresh shocks were experienced yesterday but no further damage has been reported. The Pope has sent supplies of money to the clergy of Calabria for the relief of the suffering parishioners and has ordered that the churches be kept open day and night for the use of the homeless. The Government also has forwarded $20,000,000 to the Calabrian authorities for use in the relief work and has taken every other step possible to help the sufferers. A Tempting List. Chestnuts, new table raisins, figs, dates, pineapples, green ginger, preserved ginger, pigeons, ducks, chickens, Long Point ducks, select and standard oysters, snow apples, grape fruit, California rock, Malaga grapes, extracted honey, salt mackerel, haddie, ciscoes, Holland herring, sweet cider.—Bain & Adams, 89-91 King street east. SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES. To rent at $2 a year and upwards, for the storing of deeds, bonds, stocks, wills, silver and other valuables, at the TRADERS BANK OF CANADA. The Toronto Board of Control has decided to recommend the annexation of the Deer Park district to that city.

PERPETUATE NAME OF SIMON FRASER.

Granddaughters Here Send Relics to the Government of British Columbia.

Some of the Articles Are Over 300 Years Old, But Are Well Preserved.

In connection with steps being taken by the British Columbia Government to perpetuate the memory of Simon Fraser, discoverer of the great river that bears his name, a number of old and valuable relics were sent to Vancouver this week by Misses Catherine and Agnes Fraser, King street east, the sole surviving granddaughters of the great pioneer, explorer, fur trader and soldier. This was done at the request of P. O. Schofield, Librarian of the Legislative Assembly of British Columbia, who has written explaining the efforts being put forth to gather all authentic information with a view to immortalizing the memory of the grand old pioneer, the first white man to follow the course of the Fraser from its head waters to a point many miles distant from its outlet into the Gulf of Georgia. This and his exploratory expeditions in New Caledonia, as British Columbia was then called, were achievements that stand out boldly among the work of the pioneer explorers of Canada. The British Columbia Government recently placed on record its appreciation of the services rendered by the explorer and voted to his sole surviving daughter, Miss Harriett Fraser, of Toronto, an annuity of $600 a year. The hand of death interfered, but not before Miss Fraser, with her fast ebbing strength, penned a letter of thanks to Premier McBride for the recognition of her father's great work. Two days after the despatch announcing the Government's action reached her, she passed away. Accompanying the relics forwarded this week was the following brief sketch of Simon Fraser's life, of especial interest because it was prepared by his granddaughters. A short sketch of Mr. Simon Fraser's life, the discoverer of the Fraser River, who died at St. Andrew's, in the town of Cornwall, in the year 1862, at the advanced age of 86 years: Mr. Fraser was born at Bennington, in the United States, in the year 1776. His parents emigrated to America in the year 1778, purchased property, and were comfortably settled when the Revolutionary War broke out. Simon Fraser, the father of the subject of this sketch, joined the Royal standard, was a captain in General Burgoyne's army, at the defeat of which he was taken prisoner of war and confined in Albany jail, where he died from the vigorous treatment of his captors. His widow, with her family, as soon as practicable came to Canada, first to Three Rivers; from there to Coteau du Lac; thence to St. Andrew's, where they finally settled. Simon, the youngest of the family, was sent to Montreal to school. He resided there with his uncle, Judge Fraser, who was then Chief Justice of Montreal. In 1792, at the age of 15 years, he became an articled clerk with McTavish, Frobisher & Co., in the Northwest Fur Trading Co., which had its headquarters at Montreal. In the year following he was sent to Lake Athabasca, where the company was the principal trading post of the territory of Grand Portage. In 1802 he became a partner and in 1805 he came down from Fort Athabasca to Fort William, and was there nominated to crop the Rocky Mountains, to extend outposts and form trading connections with the Indians. In August, 1805, he left Fort William and reached the foot of the mountains. His route lay through the Lake of the Woods, Lake Winnipeg and the Saskatchewan for a short distance past Cumberland House, on the Saskatchewan, then up English River as far as Isle a la Croix, then up Buffalo Lake, then over the Portage la Cache Mountains, Athabasca River and Lake to Fort Athabasca, which was the underground of the department, then up the Fraser River to the foot of the mountains, to a place which he named the Rocky Mountain Portage. There he left two clerks (named James McDougall and Archibald McGillivray), and twelve men. He then continued his route with six men to the summit of the mountains and reached a small lake of about 12 superficial miles in extent, which discharges down both sides of the mountains. (Continued on page 5.)

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—Two men walking into the sub-treasury here this morning, grabbed $9,000 that was being paid out to a National bank teller, and started to run from the building. Clerks and others gave chase and the two men were so hotly pursued that they threw the money under a street car. Both the men were captured. One of them carried a revolver. The money was in notes and was all recovered. Recovered Depositors. New York, Oct. 25.—It developed this (Continued on page 3.)

THE FATAL AUTO.

Man Dashed Against Telegraph Pole and Killed. New York, Oct. 25.—Henry Wellman, a wine merchant, of this city, was instantly killed last night in an automobile accident at Jamaica.

WILL LAY STONE.

H. L. Frost of This City to Officiate at Guelph. Mr. H. L. Frost, of this city, will lay the corner-stone of the new Methodist Church at Guelph, on Thanksgiving Day. The Methodists of Guelph have made great preparations for the important function. A silver trowel with suitable inscription has been procured, and there will be a number of speakers, ministers and laymen. Mr. Frost will go to Guelph by auto, accompanied by Mrs. Frost and Miss Mabel Taylor.

BEST CAR SERVICE EVER IT THE FRUIT SECTION.

Plenty of Refrigerator Cars Always Available at All the Shipping Points.

Beausville, Oct. 25.—(Special)—More cars are needed at shorter notice, and within a season of about six weeks by the fruit growers of the peninsula than would be used all through any other six weeks of the year for the shipping of the whole district. While trying to get as near as possible to the exact percentage of tonnage in apples and grapes hauled over the Grand Trunk, your correspondent would estimate that they supply seventy-five per cent. of the cars used between Niagara Falls and Stoney Creek. From the middle of the grape season until the apples are off, refrigerator cars are in extra demand. Some years ago, not over two, a very great difficulty was met in getting a sufficient number of these cars at the right moment, and shippers said hard things against the railway then. This year things are all O. K., as far as the supply of cars goes. The letter published in the Toronto World of Monday, and written by a manufacturer of the district, gave the Times an opportunity to find out if a grievance on car shortage existed, and if so, the fruit shippers would be the sufferers, just at this time. What did he find? On Monday afternoon there are seven empty refrigerator cars on the Beausville siding for the use of ship-

THE OLD STORY.

Shot by Companion in Mistake For a Deer. Ogdensburg, N. Y., Oct. 25.—William Durgan, aged 27 years, of Lake Placid, was shot and instantly killed by George Martin, of Averyville, who mistook him for a deer. Both were members of a large hunting party.

COMMANDS ATTENTION.

Irresistible Bargains at Begg & Shannon's To-morrow. There are several things that contribute to the interest of this issue of the Times, not the least important among which is the fine full page announcement made by Begg & Shannon, the men's outfitters, 44 James street north. The ladies will be pleased to read it, although its chief object is to impress upon the men of this country the fact that, under their roof Begg & Shannon have assembled one of the best selected stocks of fall and winter overcoats, trousers and furnishings ever shown in Hamilton. Spurred by a knowledge of the great business done the Saturday before Thanksgiving Day a year ago, they applied all their energy and cash purchasing power months ago to surprise their old and satisfied customers with values unsurpassed anywhere. The cool nights and crisp air suggests the wisdom of early buying, and with Begg & Shannon, October is the month when business crosses a trade line. To anticipate and assemble what men want is almost a science—altogether different from making lots of goods to sell at a profit. Anybody with money can fill a store with clothes, but it takes the right kind of clothes to fill it with people, and this is what Begg & Shannon will do again on Saturday. Their desire is to have the public and their clothes meet, and after an argument has ensued a basis of friendship will be at once established. With their customary appreciation they open in the morning with a cut rate sale of Scotch underwear worth 75c for 30c. All day they offer elegant $10 raincoats for $6.95. Packard shoes at $4 and $5 and best hats at $2 and $3. Men's handsome overcoats run from $7.50 to $25, and their men's suits from $10 to $25. Begg & Shannon are particularly anxious that citizens should call to-morrow, and a warm welcome will be given those who go simply to inspect the values. Read the advertisement.

INNOCENT MAN.

Electrocuted To-day According to His Spiritual Adviser. Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 25.—After the electrocution of Albert Davis in the penitentiary to-day Father Kelly, who had acted as spiritual adviser to Davis, declared that an innocent man had been electrocuted.

GREAT THANKSGIVING SALE.

Right House Announce a Sale Event. The Right House will open a great four days' sale, commencing to-morrow and continuing until Thanksgiving Day. This sale will involve the greatest bargains the Hamilton public ever saw. Fine goods in newest fall and winter styles will be on sale at prices away below real value. Get the new things for Thanksgiving wear at The Right House during these four days and save. Extraordinary bargains in every department will value-giving event which no wise woman will care to miss. Shop in the morning if you can and tell your friends of the golden opportunities. The Right House has made possible.

FIFTEEN YEARS FOR MURDER; GUILTY IN THE SECOND DEGREE.

Jury Finds Son Guilty and Mother Innocent of Harvey Kron's Murder.

Stroumborg, Pa., Oct. 25.—The jury in the case of Benjamin Courtright and his mother, Mrs. Sarah Courtright, charged with having shot and killed Harvey Kron at Millford, has rendered a verdict finding the former guilty of murder in the second degree and acquitting his mother. Courtright who is not yet 21 years old

A REMINDER.

To let you know we are still the sales agents of the purest and best candy sold on the market to-day. When we say purest and best, of course we mean Huy. When down town, stop in and get a box and find out for yourself. The quality will be remembered when the price is forgotten. Parke & Parke, druggists.

SLACK-WHITING.

On Tuesday, the 22nd inst., at the residence of the bride's father, Edward Whiting, of Oakland, Mr. Thomas A. Slack, of this city, was united in marriage to Miss Delilah Isabella Whiting. The wedding took place at 3 p. m. and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. H. Collins, of Oakland. The bridal party left for Paris, followed by the good wishes of their friends, where they will spend their honeymoon with relatives, after which they will move to Mr. Slack's residence, 43 Leaming street, Hamilton, Ont.

SHOT WIFE TO MAKE HER DEATH CERTAIN.

"She Made Me Promise I Would Prevent Her Burial Alive," Husband Testified.

New York, Oct. 25.—There were few dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told his story from the witness stand. After Dr. O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, had testified that the woman was dead from the effects of the gas before she was shot in the head, Waddell told how he and his wife had separated and how he found her living with another man. He wanted to reclaim her, he said, and on June 17 last went to call on her. He said he loved the woman dearly, and that at her request he obtained a revolver for her so that she might protect herself against another man. "Jim, do you love me?" she swore she said to him, and his reply was, "Yes, more than I do my God; I would cut off dry eyes in Judge Foster's part of General Sessions Court yesterday when Jas. Waddell, accused of aiding and abetting his wife to commit suicide, told