Farmers in Northwestern Canada Waiting for Cargo of Women

(From the Kansas City Journal)

"The problem of domestic isolation is about to be solved in a large part of the provinces of northwestern Canada. The Women's Guild of Montreal has made arrangements with two lines of steamships plying between that port and England for the passage of 4,000 domestic servants to be brought over this summer. The officers of the guild announce that applications have already been made for the services of every one of these domestic servants, and that the demand is so great that they could place twice the number already engaged. Most of these 4,000 servants will be sent to the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta. And as most of them are women, it is probable that they will be quickly snapped up as wives by the desperately lonely farmers of the Northwest. Thus history will repeat itself and the scenes enacted in Virginia and the other colonies in the earlier days of the settlement of this country will be repeated in Western Canada. To any one who has experienced the depressing isolation of the tremendous distances of the silent places of this region, there will appear as a remedy in the question of the Canadian farmers marrying their domestic servants. Under such depressing conditions the only question that presents itself is the biblical one—that a virtuous wife is more precious than jewels. No social problems of caste will vex the minds of these lone pioneers of the Northwest. They understand perfectly that if they do not promptly avail themselves of the opportunity to secure a wife some other farmer will quickly deprive them of their services by making an offer of marriage. And they also understand the curious trait in womankind which leads virtually every member of the feminine sex to prefer to work for a man all her life without pay in the hope of the realm provided the magic ring of matrimony encircles her third finger.

MOSQUITO WRECK. TWO EMPIRES?

Harvard Professor Says Malaria Laden Insect Caused Downfall of Greece and Rome

Boston, Mass., April 22.—That the fall of ancient Greece and Rome was directly due to the mosquito was asserted by Prof. W. M. Wheeler of Harvard university in a lecture yesterday. "Undoubtedly the introduction of malaria from Egypt and Asia through the medium of the mosquito was the cause of their downfall," he said. "Nearly one-half the population of Greece today is malaria infected, and the other portion, by reason of previous long attacks, has become immune."

Do You Suffer From Headaches?

There are few people who have never experienced a headache from one cause or another. It affects all ages and both sexes alike, but the female sex is naturally the more affected through the higher nervous development and more delicate organization of the system. Those also of a nervous temperament and studious or sedentary occupation are subject to it. The presence of headache nearly always tells us that there is another disease which, although we may not be aware of it, is still exerting its baneful influence, and perhaps awaiting an opportunity to assert itself plainly.
