A THOROUGH CANADIAN. A THOROUGH CANADIAN.

Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, in his recent speech at the Club National banquet, gave utterance to truly patriotic and Canadian sentiments. He said that "the Liberals of each Province rejoiced at the success of each other. Some of Mr. Mowat's opponents had made a great fuss about the French-Canadians, alleging they had no common interest with their English-speaking compatriots. That was not correct, for common interest with their English-speaking compatriots. That was not correct, for though they might speak another language and belong to another church they were at once with their English brethren in their desire to advance the common and material interests of the country. They had no desire to make up a French nation on the shores of the St. Lawrence as some people said, but they did desire to see their country go ahead. We could not always remain a colony. The time must come when we would have to take our proper position in the world and for one he awaited independence. We are all Canadians, and should work together. Any friction there was in the working of the Confederation was due to the centralizing tendencies of the Federal Government. The Liberal leader correctly reflects the ng compatriots. That was not correct, for E Liberal leader correctly reflects the blings of the large majority of the people the Dominion, no matter what their

M. Roche replied that the vote on the McKinley Bill had changed France's commercial position towards America. The prohibition of the importation of American lard, he said, might have been one of the motives for passing the McKinley Bill. The question of the admission of lard had become a secondary question as compared with the whole trade between France and America, but apart from what the Government might decide upon after further negotiations with America, France could not at present meet America's economic war by concessions. He assured the deputation that no immediate change would be made in the existing position.
