The next morning Tina came into the workroom, where monsieur and his forewoman were discussing some question regarding the work.

She was pale and heavy-eyed, a fact which attracted monsieur's attention at once. "Mademoiselle has another of her vile headaches" he said, in a ques-tioning, somewhat anxious tone.

Tina smiled faintly, but saying she thought it would pass away after a while, passed on to get her bobbins filled with thread.

As she came back monsieur stopped her again.

"Mademoiselle must not work; she must go out into the air; she will be better then. She shall go and order some nun's thread, that I must have today.

So saying, he left Madame Fouchard, and went into the hall with Tina.

As she stood there, putting on her jacket and receiving some d. rections from him, madame came forth from the work-room, as if to put some uestion to monsieur.

"Mademoiselle's jacket is all awry," she said, and, going to Tina, she gave the garment a pull, as if to set it right.

As she did so she flirted up the shirts of it, and instantly gave a cry of astonishment.

The jacket was lined, but the lining vas loose, and as madame threw up the skirts, something very startling was revealed to Tina's two compan-

Dieu!" shrieked madame, "Mon throwing up her hands and staggering back against the wall, while mon-sieur's face became as white as his shirt-front.

"What is it?" Tina asked, turning toward them, only to find herself transfixed by the manufacturer's staring eyes and madame's frightened glances.

"Will mademoiselle remove her jacket?" monsieur asked in a conmonsieur asked in a constrained voice.

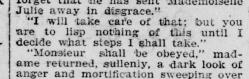

Her eyes met his again in a pure, steadfast look, and he could not help believing her, while his last words set his thoughts running in another di-

"Will you go into the office, madem-oiselle? I will talk with you further about this directly," he said, after a few moments of thoughful silence, and standing back to allow her to pass. She immediately complied, and monsieur was left alone with madame. "Listen!" he whispered, bending a stern look upon her, as the door closed upon Tina. "Not one word of this to a living soul, if you value your place "Will monsieur cover the theft, and still keep the pretty impostor?" she sneered.

"No matter what I will do!" he thundered, frowning darkly, "you are to keep your mouth shut!-you un-derstand?"

"Very well; but monsieur will not forget that he has sent Mademoiselle anger and mortification sweeping over her swarthy features as she went back to her work. Monsieur, more troubled than cared to admit, even to himself, returned to his office.

He barely glanced at her, then went and stood by a window overlooking the court, her jacket with the stolen laces still in his hands. He remained there, and was silent so long that the suspected girl became terribly nervous. From time to time she glanced in a troubled way at him, as if she would read his thoughts, and, at last, he wheeled suddenly round on her. She neither appeared startled nor changed color; her eyes sought his questioningly, and there was not the slightest shrinking in her manner as she held out her hand toward him. "Shall I remove the laces for monsieu?" she asked; then, with a slight start, she added: "But, perhaps, it is necessary that they should remain where they are for the present—until monsieur has taken some action in the matter."

'Remove them," he said briefly, and bringing the jacket to her. She took it and began to pull out the threads with which the laces had been basted upon the lining, laying them out straight upon the desk before her as she did so.

The laces, also, she carefully folded and laid in a pile, and, as the last one was removed, her eyes suddenly lighted.

She gathered the threads in her hand and looking up at monsieur, who had been watching up at housely, whi "Will monsieur kindly examine these? Here is a green, a red, and a blue thread. I have no thread in these colors; it is as if someone had seized whatever had come first or con-venient, in their haste to sew the laces into the jacket."

Monsieur took the threads and examined them. They were coarse, and the color was well defined-red, blue and green. Again she looked closely into that fair face before him. Her look and her manner were so unconscious, she was so free from embarrassment, that he could not believe her guilty.

"Tina, you did not do it!" he half questioned, half-asserted, as he bent to look into her eyes. "No. monsieur," she answered,

"No, monsieur," she answered, quietly, yet a little proudly, as if she half resented his familiarity with her name.

CANNOT FIGHT IN CINCINNATI. CANNOT FIGHT IN CINCINNATI. New York, Dec. 26.-Wm. A. Brady this evening announced that the fight be-tween J. J. Jeffries and Gus Ruhlin, scheduled to take place in Cincinnati on Feb. 5, will not be permitted by the authorities of that city. Brady says he had received word to this effect from the officials of the club which was to manage the affair. This being the case, the bouts arranged for Kid McCoy and Tommy Ryan, and Terry McGovern and Kid Lavigne, are declared off for the present. It is said that Terry McGovern will now make arrangements to go to England to fight Ben Jordan. BRADY SAYS IT'S NOT TRUE

BRADY SAYS IT'S NOT TRUE.

New York, Dec. 26.—Relative to the story printed here today, that Wm. A. Brady had announced that the Jeffries-Ruhlin fight at Cincinnati had been call-ed off, Mr. Brady said tonight that it was absolutely unirue. He says he never said anything that would lead to such a conclusion, and that the fight would come off as previously arranged.

Cincinnati, Dec. 26.—The city officials, as well as the officers and members of the Saengerfest Athletic Club, say there is no truth in reports about the fight be-tween James J. Jeffries and Gus Ruhlin, scheduled for Feb. 15 in Cincinnati, be-ing declared off. Mayor Julius Fleisch-man states for publication that he had given his word that he would issue the permit for the fight, and he proposes to do so. President W. M. Hobart, of the board of directors of the Saengerfest A. C., stated tonight that there was no doubt whatever about the fight taking place here in February, and he cannot understand why Wm. A. Brady has been misadvised or misquoted in New York. President Hobart expects Mana-ger Brady and others here the first of next week. ger Brady next week. TRIGGER.

ROYAL VISITORS FOR BIG RACE. London, Dec. 26 .- The New York Yacht London, Dec. 26.—The New York Yacht Club, says the Dally Express, will invite Emperor William and the Prince of Wales to witness the cup races, and President McKinley will also send notes expressing the pleasure their visits would give. Sir Thomas Lipton, who has been interviewed on the subject for the Dally Express, said he thought it within the range of possibility that the Prince of Wales would accept such an invitation.

HOCKEY. THE STANLEY CUP.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 26.—The secretary of the Victoria Hockey Club has wired the secretary of the Monireals and the Shamrocks proposing that the games for the Stanley cup should be played on Wednesday, Jan. 29; Friday, Jan. 31, and signed a life contract last week with one of Chicago's winsome daughters. The Interstate Baseball League failed to renew its protection agreement with the National League, and the oversight may prove costly. The players are free. Pittsburg has traded Fiaherty and Ketchum to Syraeuse for Pitcher Wiltse. The longest jump in the American League-Milwaukee to Baltimore-next season will be about 950 miles. Last season the longest jump was 960 miles-Kasas City to Buffalo. President Jahn-son says the schedule will be so arrang-ed that the total mileage will be less than last season.

FIGHT WILL TAKE PLACE. Cincinnati, Dec. 26 .- The city officials,

"Certainly," she replied, and quickly unbuttoning it, she slipped it off, won-dering if there could be some hideous spider, or perhaps a mouse, among its folds to startle them so.

Monsieur took it from her, and, lifting the skirts, revealed to her astonished gaze the missing laces, all nicely basted upon the lining, between it and the outside.

Tina beheld the act, aghast. Her face became like chalk; her heart nearly ceased its beating; her chest heaved as if oppressed by some fearful load, and all at once it flashed upon her that some enemy had done this Instinctively she glanced at madame; but she only appeared to feel the greatest horror of the deed, min-gled with joy at the recovery of the stolen property. "Mademoiselle. what does this mean?" Monsieur La Fort asked, in a shaking voice. "Monsieur, I do not know," Tina replied, lifting her white face to him, but meeting his eyes gravely but calmly.

"You do not know?" he repeated, his keen eyes searching her through and through.

"No, monsieur," and her glance, though troubled and anxious, was as innocent and unwavering as a little child's.

Instinctively he believed her, and turned to Madame Fouchard, who stood drinking in this scene, with an eager, evil look upon her disagreeable

"But this looks very badly, mademoiselle," he said, turning again to Tina, and showing her the laces.

The young girl bent forward and looked at them, and noted how nicely they had been basted into her garment-so smoothly, indeed, that she had not noticed or suspected anything of the kind, although she had worn her jacket nearly every day since their loss was discovered.

Yes, monsieur, it certainly does. she answered, slowly and sadly; "but I can only reaffirm that I know nothing about it. I did not take your laces, and did not dream that they were here. I have no use, no wish for such things, and I fear that some en-emy has done this to injure me.

e was convinced that she did not. and a deep sigh of relief bespoke the anxiety he had experienced on her account. "Give me the laces. I will put them away, and I will keep these threads for the present." He put the laces carefully in their respective places, then, after walking thoughtfully up and down the room once or twice, came up and stood be-fore Mademoiselle Florienz again.

"I am going out for a few moments: mademoiselle will please remain where she is until I return," he said. He went at once to Madame Fouchard's room in the pension, and on her dressing-table he saw her workbasket. It contained a red, a green and a blue spool of thread. He com-pared the thread which Tina had taken from her jacket with that upon the spools.

THINK RUSIE IS ALL IN.

The talk of Amos Rusie's return to the game of baseball is not received kindly by baseball men in general. Charlie Comiskey, the Chicago magnate, doesn't believe in the report, and "Bcrappy Bill" Joyce-well, he laughs at it. Speaking of the rumor that Rusie had signed with Cincinnati for next season, Comiskey

"I don't believe Rusie will ever pitch "I don't believe Rusie will ever pitch a season through again. He is all in. No pitcher can live the life Rusie has lived and retain all his speed and cleverness. I noticed Rusie said he would be willing to pitch for an American League team. I don't believe any Am-erican League team would have him. He certainly wouldn't do in Chicago." "Scrappy" Joyce says Rusie's belief that he can still pitch is a joke. "In his prime Kusie was the king of them all," says "Scrappy." 'but that was managing the Giants, I saw signs of decay. Before a game we would take turns rubbing Rusie's arm with red-hot salve. He would warm up until time to pitch and we would take the field, but he couldn't last more than five innings then." SPORTING NOTES.
