VOCATIONAL TRAINING.

What about vocational training? Is Campbellton to take advantage of this important branch of education or not? If the former is the case then steps ought to be taken without any unnecessary delay. As explained by the town solicitor the initial move is for the town council to pass the resolution called for under the Act re Compulsory Education.

There are many reasons why vocational training should be embraced in the programme of our school work. To deal adequately with the subject would require a very lengthy article but it is possible, even in limited space, to set down some important facts which argue strongly in its favor and which, too often, are not given due consideration.

It is estimated that sixty-four per cent of the boys and girls in the United States leave school before they reach the eighth grade. A similarly large percentage applies to this matter in our Canadian schools. Some of these, of course, are obliged to leave and seek work because of economic conditions, but the great majority of them leave because they are tired of school and because they do not feel that the instruction they are receiving is essential to success in the particular line of work they intend to follow. Some of these students want to go to the farm, others to the shop, others wish to enter the commercial world and others want to be home-liners. And it has never been possible, until recently, and as yet only to a limited degree, for the boy who wants to do anything except to be a professional man, to secure at school a technical education for the vocation which he has selected as his life work.

This is where vocational training solves a big problem.

WHIST PARTY AT THE CLUB.

FISH MEN GO TO DEER ISLAND

14 Members of "Trust" Begin Sentences—Only Charles St. Jail.

The recent sentencing to prison terms of varied length of fourteen wealthy and prominent New York business men who were members of a "fish trust" there, has caused some excitement in different parts of Restigouche. The names of one or two of these defrauders sound vaguely familiar to people in New Mills where a "Fish Company" of a somewhat ambiguous nature was partly established a few years ago. It is not definitely known whether the "fish men" recently sentenced had any connection with this enterprise but conjecture and supposition are rampant in that vicinity.

New York—Fourteen members of the so-called "fish trust" were taken to Deer Island today to begin sentences ranging from five to ten months at hard labor in addition to fines from $50 to $1000 each in amount.

They spent their first night after sentence in the Charles street jail, as the last boat had left for the island before the proceedings in the superior court were concluded.

Striking Contrast. Guarded from publicity by a deputy sheriff and a jail attendant, eight of the men left in the first vanload from the Charles street jail today.

Deputy Charles A. Heints stood between the men and the newspaper photographers. Each of the men ran from the jail to the waiting van with his overcoat pulled well up to hide his face.

The eight of the fourteen sentenced who left in the first van were F. Munroe Dyer, Alvin G. Barker, Winfield S. Kendrick, Joseph A. Rich, Joseph Paine, Ernest A. James, Jr., Albert E. Watts and Lewis B. Goodspeed.

The second load of the second vanload of the fish men marked the jail were Herbert F. Phillips, Fred G. Phillips, William E. Curran, John Burns, Jr., Willard R. Cox and Ephraim N. Cook.

At the pier today they were not put into the regular detention room with the other prisoners, but space was reserved for them in the women's detention room.

An Italian woman, accompanied by her daughter, appeared at the pier to speak to her son who was to go to the island. The woman was allowed to enter. The son caught sight of her, cried out: "am going to Deer Island," and was immediately pushed into the detention room for men. His mother went away crying.

Friends Say Farewell. Several friends of the "fish trust" men came down to see them off, and were allowed to enter the detention room and bid them farewell.

The grim severity of prison walls which surrounded them was in striking contrast to the luxury of the homes which many of the convicted men have hitherto occupied.

Several of these men are known to be very wealthy, and to possess stock holdings in successful business enterprises apart from the fish business in which they were found guilty of creating a monopoly to increase the price of fish.

They did not have to take prison fare, but sent out for their meals. Their breakfast consisted of fruit and cereals, which they ate with little relish after a night of fitful sleep.

They appeared gloomy and depressed by their experience and had little to say. They will not have to take of prison food until they begin their sentences at the house of correction. Their status at the jail was that of men detained for safe keeping.

After dinner they were taken in the county prison van to Eastern avenue wharf to board the steamer for the trip down the harbor.

P. H. Brennan, one of the attendants in charge of the prisoners, grew into men the photographers tried to snap pictures of the men at the wharf and ordered them to leave if they could not show passes. The photographers declared that, while they were compelled to show passes to go on board the boat, no passes were given needed for a public landing. They light work. Usual work for prisoners serving short sentences is on the farm or pigery.

As with all other prisoners, their farm or pigery.

street clothes will be taken from them at the island and they will be given the prison garb of gray denim. Arrivals at the prison are usually sent to the "steamer" for the delousing process, but in some cases prisoners are required merely to take a hot shower bath in the presence of attendants. This includes a thorough washing of the hair after rubbing in a preparation containing kerosene.

Will Be Put to Work. After the bath the fish men will be assigned to cells. As the sentence calls for hard labor each will be given some work to do in accordance with his physical ability. Two or three of the fish men are well over 60 years of age and will probably be given board the boat, no passes were given needed for a public landing. They light work.
