Luncheon to the Officers.

The salvation army held a grand prize fight at their barracks last night. None of your sinful, carnal fights with hard or soft gloves, but a real blood and fire set-to with auld Clootic himself. If shouting, tambourine thumping, waving of handker-chiefs, (very dirty ones) and other maniacal proceedings, could have annihilated the old man they would have succeeded, but unfortunately he did not care a rap for any of them. Each round he came up quite fresh and smilling, and when the army were completely exhausted and had to throw up the sponge, he smiled a smile that was childlike and bland, and expressed his willingness to meet any, or all of them, at some future Salvation Prize Fight.

A severe squall swept over the bay at 6 o'clock yesterday evening playing havoc with the boats out at the time. The Oriole was keeled over, her sails dropping in the water. She was obliged to squat her canvas and was rowed in by the J. S. Edwards, which boat also came to the assistance of two yachts which were capsized. The occupants escaped with a wetting. A sailor who has spent some time on the water was heard to remark that it was the worst squall he has yet experienced.

The gardens were completely packed last evening to witness Prof. Hand's grand display of fireworks and listen to the music of the Heintzman band, which, under the leadership of Mr. Pye, played several excellent selections. However, they had no more than reached the pavement when they were nabbed and locked up on a charge of vagrancy. At police head-quarters Leavett saw it was no use further denying his identity and admitted the corn. Since Mackie has taken hold of Hanlan's it since Mackie has taken hold of Hanlan's it has been the place where cool breezes and solid comfort can be had ad libitum. No visitor to the centennial should fail to pay Mackie a visit at his island hotel, and no visitor should leave the island without making a thorough inspection of the Han-lan trophies which still grace the spacious halls of this famous summer resort. "See Rome and be happy," was the cry of the andient Romans. See Mackie's island hotel and inspect Hanlan's trophies should be the cry of all semi-centennial visitors. "Oh, look at this!" was an expression IN THE NAME OF HUMANITY. that frequently fell from ladies' lips on Monday night and all day yesterday, as nembers of the sex caught a glimpse of foliloguy of a Poor Street Car Horse, as the interior of Murray & Company's store. Overheard by a Passenger.

Whoa! I tell you it's no joke to be a street After the hour of closing Monday night Mr. Drynan and his assistant artists (and this is no abuse of the term) went to work and transformed the space stretching from the door to the rear of the store into a within. Stop, eh? Surely they don't mean to take on any more? No, thanks be! It's three fat men and two women getting off—well—every little helps. But now I wonder how many tons of human flesh one single horse is supposed to be able to draw, with the thermometer in a chronic state of ascension? Among all the boasted merciful institutions in this semi-centennial city, is there no society for the prevention of cruelty to animals? If so, early they campel the street early server. the door to the rear of the store into a perfect dream of beautiful dry-goods. The expression of everybody who saw it was that there never was seen in Toronto such a harmonious whole of charming colors, shapes and materials. It seemed as if everything that a dry-goods establishment could sell had its representation there. It is a pity that it could not remain there all week, but the inexorable demands of business will compel its removal this morning. If so, can't they compel the street car company to hitch in another horse to help along? Good lands! look at you corner. One, two, three, four, flye, six, seven; and every woman It is time the police sat on the salvation laden with a baby, which don't count! London, July 1.—The Fortescue-Garmoyle breach of promise case has been withdrawn. The Earl of Cairns, Lord shall I ever get to the end of the street? What! rmy, or at least learned them to bewhich, heaven forbid, if their lot there is to be anything like what it is here. Oh! for the gift of speech. If I was an ass now. and was to meet an angel (quite an every day occurrence on these streets), and she was to loosen my tongue, I would tell the christian, praying people of this city that He prayeth best who loveth best,
