The Succession to the Vice-Presidency, It appears that there is no constitutional or statutory provision for the succession to the presidency of the United States should the death or disability of President Cleveland occur. There is no president protein of the senate, and there is no speaker of the house of representatives, and neither branch of congress is in session. Several efforts have been made of late years to make some provision for such an exigency as now exists, and always without success, because the exigency seemed remote, and therefore senators and congressmen would not give attention to the matter, or the situation was such that any provision that could be made would give an advance price. The only inference is Dundas Cotton 65, 60. that his platform is one of creed and creed alone, which would drive all non-Catholics on to a common Protestant platform.
