In the defence the latter asserted that they were not liable for these repairs be-cause the pavement had been improperly select-ed and constructed. Mr. Justice Rose gave judgment then that the city, could not recover from the company for construction or repair-ing if the former had been negligent in either the construction or selection. After this de-dision the company cased to make payments on the construction account and annoton was made in February, 1888, to restrain the city from collecting the assessments by distress.
