THE EXHIBITION REVIEWED.

At the time of our last issue the interesting event was in active progress, and we then gave our readers some notes of what had transpired from the start until the formal opening by the speaker, His Honor Judge McDonald.

Passing from bread to butter is easy and natural, and that is what we find in the next class, consisting of Dairy products, and twenty-five packages or samples are offered for competition.

Going through the exhibits in detail class one, that of horses, first claims our attention. In this class forty-four entries have been made. Among them are some very fine specimens.

We next come upon the cattle, in which class the entries number one hundred and eleven.

But we must not further digress, but give our attention to the sheep, in which department we now find our entries, and all fairly good, considering all things.

Our attention is next called to the swine, and we ascertain that the only eight farmers in the two counties possess the requisite stock of patience and perseverance required to transport these proverbially contrary brutes from their homes to this exhibition.

We now enter the building and look over the roots and vegetables, in which are two hundred and eighty-seven samples and varieties.

Grain and flax seeds come next on the list, and here are one hundred and forty-two samples, of which fall and spring wheats are in largest number.

How Eggs are going up—J. W. Beckwith has made an advance on them this week. Don't sell until you call on him.

JUDGE McDONALD'S OPENING SPEECH.

J. B. Mills, Esq., introducing the speaker of the day, said that in response to the request of the committee of management the Hon. James McDonald had kindly consented to inaugurate the proceedings.

Mr. McDonald, coming forward, said: "I am much honored to appear before you on this occasion, and to preside over the opening of this exhibition."

—The exhibition was closed about half past three o'clock on Thursday afternoon in a few appropriate remarks. Immediately after the closing the following resolutions were adopted by A. Longley, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Hornell:
