COMPOUND
CHAMOMILE CORDIAL.

THIS Cordial, as its name announces, is prepared according to a Member of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, from the Flowers of Chamomile and other valuable ingredients, selected especially from England. Not only are the flowers of Chamomile the most valuable preparation, but also the roots, leaves, and stems, which are required in this Cordial, have acquired a most valuable reputation, comprising the former ingredients, to which is added Chamomile root water, as well as a few drops of Camomile. It is incomparably superior.

These ingredients, while fully preserved, are more delicately concentrated and developed in the Cordial, than in their transparency and golden colour, exceeding Water, and as such may be used at discretion. The flavor is fresh and free grand, and the taste truly grateful and invigorating, either in the body, the Temperature, or in Goutous Complaints.

TESTIMONIALS:

Toronto, June 26th, 1852.

Mrs. REEDSON & Co.

GENTLEMEN.—We have tasted the Sample Bottle, with which you favoured us, of your "Compound Chamomile Cordial," and find it as you describe, fragrant and agreeable to the palate, and consider it an excellent Preparation for the use of the valuable Tonics Properties of the Flowers of Chamomile.

We are, &c.,

GEORGE HERRICK, M.D.
JOHN KING, M.D.

77 Bay Street, Toronto, June 29, 1852.

GENTLEMEN.—I duly received and have tried the sample of "Compound Chamomile Cordial" which you sent me.

Aware of the manner in which you prepare it, and of the nature and quality of the ingredients which you employ to its manufacture, I cannot afford to express my opinion, writing my opinion of it, which I should not hesitate to do under different circumstances.

I consider it a very elegant Pharmaceutical Preparation, as regards of being made exceedingly useful in a dietician as well as therapeutic point of view. It will serve as an excellent substitute for much of the tea which is purchased as Tea for the use of invalids, and will also prove an excellent medium for the agreeable conveyance of remedies, which, without some assistance, are often rejected against and rejected by the sick.

I am, Gentlemen,

Yours, &c.,

FRANCIS BADGLEY, M.D.

Mrs. REEDSON & Co.

I consider it a very elegant Preparation, and useful in cases where a mild Tonic is required, more especially in cases of Dyspepsia and the weakness of the Stomach. It being very agreeable to taste, can be taken by any one.

GENTLEMEN.—I have received the Sample Bottle of your "Compound Chamomile Cordial," and consider it a beautiful as well as highly restorative preparation. The aromatic and peculiar bitter flavor, in which lies the essential Medicinal qualities, appear to be largely infused and well preserved; and as this valuable Tonic is truly beneficial in those forms of Dyspepsia, depending on debility, or want of tone of the digestive organs, (the form most frequently met with on the continent,) your Cordial will, I doubt not, form an inestimable addition to our Pharcaco-poeia.

From the knowledge possessed by me of Mr. Rexford, and his very high reputation as a Pharmaceutical Chemist, I feel much pleasure in confidently recommending his preparation of this valuable Tonic to my Professional brethren, and to the public, as a delightful and invigorating Cordial.

I am, Yours, &c.,

GEORGE HOLMES,
Surgeon.

Mrs. REEDSON & Co. Toronto.

GENTLEMEN.—I have no hesitation in expressing to you my professional approbation of your "Compound Chamomile Cordial." The tonic properties of the Flowers of Chamomile, with which it is finely inclosed, are so universally acknowledged, and the Medicinal qualities of that valuable ingredient so fully admitted in Dyspeptic complaints, that I consider the idea of introducing it, in the pleasing form of a Cordial, most happy, and desirable, to your practice, inasmuch that it cannot fail to be popular with the public.
