

Q. Why aren't diplomats who drink and drive prosecuted in Canada?

A. The Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations gives immunity to diplomats from arrest and detention and the criminal jurisdiction of a state. Where criminal charges are laid, including for impaired driving, it is Canadian policy to request waiver of immunity so the person can be prosecuted here. If a state refuses to waive immunity, Canada expects that state to take appropriate action against the diplomat.