This Vancouver project was of such importance that Sir William himself was at Vancouver in connection with it. If Vancouver will grant the C. N. R. that tract of land lying on the outskirts of Vancouver and known as the False Creek district, the C. N. R. have agreed to establish great terminal yards. By the terms of this agreement the C. N. R. is to establish a suburban service between Vancouver, New Westminster and Port Mann; build a four mile tunnel connection with the city at a cost of four million dollars; electrify the line into Vancouver, and ilso electrify the whole of the False Creek yards, and in addition spand four mil dollars on terminal facilities. One of the finest passenger stations in the
