DIRECT EVIDENCE AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

Circumstantial evidence points very conclusively to the theory that the Provincial Government has all along had a guilty knowledge of the source of the money that was taken into the different constituencies and used by the machine gang in the prosecution of their criminal work. It is admitted that the money came from without the constituencies and that it was handled by outsiders. No one has yet been able to suggest the name of any outside individual or organization except the Government that was interested in the result of any of the bye-elections. It is admitted that the money was put into a single dollar. The evidence taken at the North Waterloo trial is more than circumstantial. It is direct and positive, and supplies the missing link between the Government and the gang. One of the gang working in this election was a party named Cummings. It was proved that Cummings, who was a deputy returning officer, had designedly counted ballots marked for Lackner as if they had been marked for Brethaupt, the Liberal candidate. The judgment says of the Cummings case: "The like conclusion must be reached in Cummings' case. It is incredible that the miscounting of the ballots was unintentional. There is but one way of accounting for it under all the circumstances detailed in the evidence, and that is that it was wilfully and fraudulently done by him."

There is nothing startling in Cummings' criminality. Scores of other men can be named who committed election frauds equally as serious as that established against Cummings. The point about the Cummings case is this: Cummings was the nominee of Hon. E. J. Davis, a member of the Government. Cummings had been set aside by the returning officer, but the Provincial Secretary intervened in his behalf and had him reappointed. Here, then, we have a member of the Government responsible for the appointment of one of the men who is now being prosecuted for election fraud. Furthermore, we have the evidence of Mr. Snider, vice-president of the North Waterloo Reform Association, to the effect that Hon. Messrs. Gibson and Davis promised "to send speakers and organizers into the riding to help the Liberals in the coming election." We know from the evidence that the organizers who were sent into the riding were experts in election criminality. It was these organizers that distributed the money to the local workers, who in turn used it for bribing the electors. Among the organizers sent in as promised were those notorious individuals, viz.: Vance of Toronto, Lewis of London, Brant of Whitby, Carroll of North Toronto and Thompson, an official of the Education Department. Mr. Hardy in his valedictory address to the members of the Government was not personally cognizant of the means that were being employed to win the bye-elections for the Government. In the light of the circumstantial and direct evidence that has been adduced, we must refuse to believe the Premier. The Government was cognizant of the fraud, and all size of the election, and they will be held responsible for it.

But even supposing the Government is not responsible for these election frauds, it certainly cannot escape responsibility for not enforcing the law once the frauds were disclosed. Months have elapsed since the West Elgin crimes were exposed, yet no steps have been taken to bring the individuals to trial. No plea can possibly justify the Government for its neglect to set the law in motion against the criminals of the West Elgin and South Ontario elections. Only the other day the judges in the North Ontario election trial named a score of men for bribery, perjury and other election frauds. No move has been made as yet to have these men apprehended and tried. And yet it is for serious offences against the law that they have been named by the judges. If a charge of larceny were preferred against them they would all be in jail by this time. But on the more serious charge of bribery and perjury they are un molested. From all these facts, can any sane man doubt that the members of the Government are themselves the fountain head of the law in his new position is to order his Attorney-General to have all the criminals arrested at once. If a score or two of these men found themselves in prison and half a dozen smart detectives were poking their noses into their pockets soon he put in the Government is innocent, the new Premier will prosecute; if it is implicated, the law will remain a dead letter.

CANADA'S RIGHTS SACRIFICED. The modus vivendi arrived at by Great Britain and Canada in regard to the Canadian boundary is another set-back to Canada's claim. The United States holds, under the modus, all that it claims under the treaty. The United States has nothing to gain by pushing the case to our side. We are not to be allowed to reach any point on the Lynn Canal. We are to have no free port, and are to be denied the privilege of transferring Canadian goods across American territory without payment of duty to the United States. No sacrifice whatever has been made by the United States. If the modus vivendi had been made conditional upon the boundary dispute being referred to arbitration, a little objection could be urged against it. But arbitration, we take it, is now farther off than ever. It looks very much as if the outbreak of war in South Africa had had something to do with the temporary settlement of the dispute. The New York Tribune accepts the settlement as an evidence that Great Britain "hopes—and not, we assume, in vain—to have a goodly measure of moral support and sympathy from the United States."

NOT A QUESTION OF TAXES. Mr. Tarte defends his anti-British position on the principle of the "modus vivendi" representation. This is the doctrine announced in an article in La Patrie, on Mr. Bourassa's resignation. There is no logic in citing this political axiom in the present case. Canada is not being asked to send a contingent to South Africa. There is no question of taxes whatever. The point at issue is whether Canada shall voluntarily contribute the money necessary to send a contingent to the Transvaal. If Great Britain made a demand on us for a regiment of soldiers, or for money, it would be another question.

MADE OF THE RIGHT STUFF.

An incident at the Armouries on Saturday Showing Just What a Canadian Are.

An incident took place at the Armouries on Saturday which not only has a big touch of romance about it but accurately mirrors how keen is the competition among Canadian military men to find a place in the contingent. The men of the 31st Regiment had been drawn up for Col. Otter's inspection. As he ran his experienced eye down its ranks he noticed the well-known figure of Lieut. H. Horke, calling him out, the colonel said: "Horke, I can't take you; you are an officer." "But I go as a private, sir," was the reply, but the colonel only answered: "I can't help that, you must step out, I cannot consider you at all." Lieut. Horke stands 5 feet 10 inches, is 23, a thorough athlete and one of the smartest officers in Canada. He was no made out of the stuff to be cast down at the first rebuff. Stepping out as ordered, he walked out of the Armouries. In a quarter of an hour the 31st ranks were disbanded and Col. Otter was mounting his horse to ride home again. He had one foot in the stirrup when Lieut. Horke walked up and saluted. "I've wired my resignation to my colonel and am now a private," he said; "have I any chance now?" Col. Otter's strong face relaxed into a smile as he remarked: "Young man, I admire your pluck." Then he galloped away. The bystanders broke into a cheer and the plucky lieutenant, in view of the shortage in volunteers, is likely yet to be taken.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT HULL.

Pharand's Departmental Store the Scene—Narrow Escape and Heroic Rescue.

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—A fire originated yesterday in Pharand's departmental store in Hull and destroyed property to the extent of $20,000. Pharand's store is situated opposite the City Hall on Ingersoll-street. The tailoring department is a wooden structure adjoining the main building in the rear. Mrs. Pharand and her two children were upstairs when the fire occurred. They came out on the top verandah and one child, Adam, aged 12, jumped to the awning below and was caught by the spectators. Mrs. Pharand fell unconscious because she could not get down. Her husband, for the courage of her eldest son, Joseph, might have been suffocated. Joseph, an upstairs and pulled his mother and brother from the verandah and helped them downstairs. The store and contents were totally destroyed.

LEINSTERS TO LEAVE HALIFAX.

They Go to Cork and Will Be Replaced by the Worcesterhire Regiment From West Indies.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 22.—The Leinster Regiment is to leave Halifax. They will embark on Nov. 15 for Cork, Ireland, being relieved by the Worcesterhire Regiment now stationed in the West Indies. When the regiment came to Halifax it was made up mainly of raw recruits, mostly Irish and never been a mile away from home. They have picked up wonderfully since their improvement during the past six months has been very marked, and the indications are that at no distant day the regiment will be classed among the best in the Queen's service.

TRAFALGAR DAY

Was Celebrated Patriotically by Sons of St. George New Resident in New York.

New York, Oct. 22.—Nelson Lodge, No. 64, Order of the Sons of St. George, gave a dinner last night in commemoration of the 94th anniversary of the battle of Trafalgar. More than 100 Englishmen gathered around the tables in the Teutonic assembly room. The walls of the room were covered with English flags, draped with the Stars and Stripes. The toast master was H. C. Hayward, president of the lodge. Among other speeches, none were listened to with keener interest than those given by the speaker, who was greeted with hearty cheers, than the toast, "The Transvaal Crisis," which was delivered by the Rev. St. Marks Cadman.

COLLISION OFF GOODWIN SANDS.

British Steamers Came Together and One Was Sunk.

London, Oct. 22.—During a thick fog the British steamer Lariston for Marseilles from Rotterdam was sunk in a collision with the Goodwin Sands by the British steamer Crimea. The damage to the Crimea is unknown. There were no fatalities.

Military Night at the Princess.

To-night will be military night at the Princess Theatre, to give the Toronto company C, a grand farewell, and to wish them all a safe return, before their departure for the Transvaal. All the officers and soldiers will occupy the boxes, which have been reserved for them. Mr. Harwood (the opera) Crane has been retained for to-night only, and it is expected that "Soldiers of the Queen" will be joined by everybody, and create wider enthusiasm than ever. With the special engagement of Mr. Joseph Callahan as a star, and with his thorough knowledge and ability in staging the play, the production will be absolutely perfect from the standpoint of the audience in its grandness and it is asserted that the production will be a surprise to everyone. The scenery is well arranged and represents Mr. Louis Felt's best efforts. The costumes are also new, having been made for this production. The orchestra is made up of hundreds of dollars, and the music is the regular "Faust" music, similar to the opera. The illuminated scene, the famous Broderick scene, the electric duel, will all be vividly staged, and Mr. Callahan has nothing but commendable efforts for the scenic artists, carpenters and the cast. Mr. Ralph Cummings appears as Valentine, Miss Florence Stone as Marguerite, Mr. Phillips as Faustus, Miss Anderson as Dancie, Miss Martha, Miss Nettie, Mrs. Mack and Messrs. Frazier, Shumer and Mack as the students. Miss L. J. Shea has been engaged to sing the Ave Maria in the church scene, to the organ accompaniment of Prof. Bohner.

Did Daniel Take It?

While on York-street Saturday night Detective Davis received word that a young man was trying to sell a Gondron wheel for $2. The detective investigated and, after a little talk with the stranger, placed him under arrest. In a short time Mr. C. H. Kieberger, steward of the Gondron, called at Police Headquarters and identified the wheel as his property. He said it had been stolen from the front of the Tremont. The prisoner gave his name as Daniel Downs, a telegraph operator, whose home is in New York.

Railway Collision in Belgium.

Brussels, Oct. 22.—The Indian mail train today collided with a freight train near Scherbroek, a suburb of Brussels, three train cars being demolished. Eighteen passengers were injured, but none fatally.

On Friday, at 4 p.m., the annual meeting of the Infants' Home will be held at 21 St. Mary-street.

THIS "PLUNGE" MEANT DEATH.

But for the Timely Aid of South American Kidney Cure.

A promising young printer and publisher in a northern town, while overworked from wheeling, took a "plunge" in the lake, inside of a month kidney disease developed, and medical swelling was very apparent. He treated with local doctors, and on their advice he visited a specialist in Toronto, but was told his case was a hopeless one. He quit the doctors, went to taking South American Kidney Cure, and to-day he is the best of health and has been for 12 months.
