HELENE'S MARRIED LIFE

BY MAY CHRISTIE

Copyright, 1920, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

L.—"I Think He's Dying."

The departure of Jim's mother gave me no chance at explanation. It almost seemed as though Alice had guessed my anxiety for a telephone with Mrs. St. Aubyns, and had deliberately prevented it.

Maybe the whole thing had been a put-up job between Tony and Alice. I could perfectly believe them capable of it.

And yet—what could the motive be? Unless—unless it were really true that my Jim had had an affair with Alice. And Alice wanted to end my hopes regarding Jim.

I'd go away at once, I decided. I wouldn't stay here to be made miserable.

"Alice," I said, giving back her cool, keen look with interest. "I really think that I shall return today to my apartment in town. I'm not helping you down here. You don't need me."

Alice thawed a little, though she wasn't cordial.

"Just as you like, Helene. Though, personally, I rather like to have you."

I could have laughed aloud. "Rather liked," indeed!

"I'm going," I said tersely. Helene, what's the matter?"

I broke out angrily. "Oh, everything's the matter! But principally Tony. He's such an unutterable cad."

Alice winced.

"Tony? A cad?"

"He's all of that—and more!" I was beside myself with indignation. "Last night he forced himself into this house—and he had the impudence to cover up an awkward situation by telling Mrs. St. Aubyns that he and I were going to be married."

"Engaged Helene? Are you engaged to Tony?" Alice's voice was sharp.

"Not if he were the last man on earth!" I cried emphatically.

"You don't care for him? You're positive you don't?"

"Of course I don't! Heaven, Alice, when there are real men in the world why should I care for Tony, or for any other rotter?"

"He's not a rotter," defended Alice, though her tones were rather weak and undecided.

"Don't talk to me of Tony. I know him better than you do. B. damn your vanity, Alice—otherwise your common sense would never run away with you to the extent of believing in a man of Tony's calibre."

This was plain speaking, with a vengeance.

Alice didn't like it. But I could see she was really relieved that I did not care for Tony.

"It was very wrong of him to tell Mrs. St. Aubyns that you and he were engaged," she said slowly. "It can't think what his motive was. Can you?"

Yes—I could think! But it might not be expedient to tell Alice the result of my conclusions. That would involve the tale of Tony's bringing-up by the St. Aubyns family, and the forging of the check would naturally come in on the matter. But it seemed to me the time was not yet sufficiently ripe for any prying.

I prevaricated.

"Tony's just naturally a cad," I said. "Ask him why he told such a falsehood."

But I know Alice wouldn't. For Tony would merely deny having done anything of the sort.

Knowing Tony's little ways as she is, Alice would merely have done anything of the sort.

Of course he is presentable. He plays bridge well. He has a good seat in the saddle. He can drive a car, and shoot and hunt, and fish. He is a good golfer and first class tennis-player. And he's decorative. There's a good deal of the poodle-dog in Master Tony. Tagging around his person when Alice knows where the best meals are to be found.

But I notice that his men friends aren't numerous. The fact that he is good at sport. They guess he's shady. Women's don't, however.

Alice suddenly patted me on the arm. And she was smiling, with some show of amiability.

"Don't let's talk of Tony, Helene. Let's be cheerful, dear. And listen—I particularly want you to stay on down here for a while. I want your company. I may be a little short-tempered sometimes—but I like you, Helene. So don't run away. Please don't."

I hesitated.

"As for Mrs. St. Aubyns," went on Alice, whooping, "she's so worried over her son that I'm sure she didn't take in a single word of what you told her. Besides, the netting she's doing for you, she'll be down here in a day or two."

That settled it. I stayed.

I didn't see Jim all that day. I was to take my turn with him immediately after dinner, Alice said, so that the nurse might have a nap.

Towards five o'clock Alice and I were sitting in the drawing-room enjoying a quiet cup of tea. The door opened hurriedly and a maid appeared. She looked very agitated.

"Phone for the doctor at once," she cried. "The patient's worse. I think he's dying!"

Tomorrow—"Within An Hour."

Rupture Kills 7,000 ANNUALLY

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the signs (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment. But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to a FREE trial in the privacy of their own homes. The PLAPAO is a scientifically constructed, logical and successful self-treatment for ruptures. The world has ever known no other method so effective. To the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place—easy to apply—impenetrable. To be worn while you are awake or asleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached. No need to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture can't come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO, 415 St. Louis, Mo. Plapao and the information necessary

QUEBEC WOMAN HAD SUFFERED 18 YEARS

Tanlac Gave Me Health and Strength and Joy, Says Mrs. Maddison.

"I was so rundown that I was thinking of quitting work," said Mrs. E. and Maddison, who is superintendent of the girl's department of the Rock City Tobacco Company's factory in Quebec, when seen by the Tanlac representative at her home, 31 Smith street, Quebec, recently.

"For eighteen years I have suffered from nervous indigestion with all its distressing accompaniments of excessive gas, dizziness and bad headaches, but lately it had got very much worse. I was eating scarcely enough to keep body and soul together and got very thin. Neuralgia pains drove me almost to distraction and the rheumatism in my arms was so severe that I could hardly use them. My sleep was very disturbed and broken, and in the mornings I felt tired and weary. I began to see that if I did not soon find a remedy for my condition I would collapse. I must have tried nearly every medicine that the druggists sell, but they never helped me one particle."

"I had read in the papers about how people had derived great benefit from Tanlac, so I thought I would put it to the test. I do indeed congratulate myself on doing so because it has helped me wonderfully. I have now taken four bottles of the medicine and this is what it has done for me: My appetite is splendid, and I not only enjoy my food, but find that I can digest it without difficulty. I feel better both in body and in spirits. I give you these facts gladly, for Tanlac has given me health and strength and joy at a time when I was a much discouraged woman by my bad state of health."

Tanlac is sold in London by Standard Drug, Limited, and by an established agency in every town.

LDERTON

LDERTON, April 10.—The regular meeting of the Goldstream U. F. O. Club was held on Tuesday evening with Arch McGugan in the chair. After routine business William Chapman, president of the Fern Hill Club, spoke briefly of the newly-organized club at Fern Hill, which is steadily growing in membership.

Hert Tomlinson of Amiens Club, Adelaide, also spoke briefly.

The debate on "Married Life vs. Single Life," which was scheduled to come, failed to materialize.
