The "Kaffir King" Has Added Another Agent in British Columbia.

It is stated that the Whitewater, 18 miles from Kaslo, in the Kootenai, has been sold to the Paget Sound Reduction Company of Everett, Wash., for $500,000 cash.

This mine first came into prominence only about a year ago, though it is one of the earliest locations in the country.

The owners of the property before the sale were J. C. Eaton, J. R. Bittell, J. L. Montgomery, and W. C. Pierce, all of Kaslo. It produces both galena and carbonate ores, the former averaging over 200 ounces of silver and 50 per cent. in lead, and the latter 150 ounces of silver and 20 per cent. in lead.

Clark and Dwyer of Salmo, B. C., have been directed to go ahead with the bridge across the Salmon River, pursuant to a bid submitted to the Government some days ago. This bridge is being built by the Government to enable easy access to the mines in the Sheep Creek district. The firm will commence construction immediately.

Should the locators of some claims value their prospects as high in proportion as are their "discovery" post, they must consider themselves as having wasted wealth while the snow was quite deep, says the Kootenai News. In several cases the inscriptions on the posts are practically "out of sight," one in particular being at the top of a 15-foot tree, driven three feet into the ground. The "mineral" in place to which this inscribed post refers is a very fine specimen of gold quartz, with which the mine has been the ax with which he drove the stake or the "brand" he displayed in driving it.
