UTILITY POULTRY

MUCH IN EVIDENCE

Classes on View at Exhibition Correspond to Demands of Time.

PETS ARE PLENTIFUL

Hares, Rabbits and Pigeons Delight Youthful Visitors to Section.

Pride in the raising of poultry is a pronounced note at the Exhibition, where in birds of different varieties there are something over 4000 entries. Corresponding to the demands of the time the utilitarian classes are largely in evidence, a determination seeming to exist among breeders to keep this point in view. Still another noticeable feature is that the exhibits come from many points near and distant, so that the display in some ways is really representative of the Dominion.

Among well-known varieties are some very fine Buff Loughbys, old-fashioned Plymouth Rocks and Spunk fowl, winners of first class prize, in this last class being from Hamilton, Brantford and London. Beautiful White Wyandottes, Orpingtons, Columbian and Brahmas are all well to the fore. There are also attractive specimens of Andalusians, Anconas and other birds which hail from southern Europe. The Rhode Island Reds are among the handsomest specimens shown. Among the small birds the Bitch Game Bantam with silver and black plumage is very attractive. A pair of Frizzle fowl chickens, every feather of which is curled, is somewhat of a novelty. These birds are raised in England as bantams, but the large variety as shown at the Exhibition are rare and are new to Toronto. When full grown they are beautifully white.

Pigeon Raising. The place that pigeon raising is obtaining in many homes is shown by the large number of entries, of which there are 153. Here a new variety is the Sublim, which is something like the old Murrelet duck, but very much smaller. The Parlor Roller is a very interesting bird. It cannot fly and its value increases in proportion to its inability to raise itself from the ground. Specimens taken from their cages for demonstration for The World representative exhibited their mode of locomotion by rolling rapidly their full length along the floor. "If they could raise themselves a foot the judge would throw them out," explained their guardian.

A fine exhibit of Jacobins is shown by Mrs. P. Nesbitt, who has carried off nearly all the money in this section. One of the birds is valued at $150, an offer of $100 having been refused. This bird is a fine specimen in tan and white, his head and eyes being almost effaced by the handsome buff which rises from both sides of his throat.

Children's Pets. Rabbits and hares are pets among the small boy visitors, and are altogether a beautiful showing. In the Belgian hares section are the Flemish Giants, which, in keeping with their name, are of abnormal size and the possessors of very fine coats. Geese and turkeys are well represented, the

CANADA'S SEAGIRT PROVINCES

IN MINDS OF VISITORS TODAY

Judging of Fruit and Vegetables and Work of Dairy, as Illustrated in Buttermaking, Objects of Attention at the Fair.

Today is devoted to the Maritime Provinces at the National Exhibition and the old parts of Canada down by the sea will be in the minds and memories of Exhibition visitors.

Perhaps this year more than on any former occasion the products of the salt waters are outstanding in the economy of the nation, and fish as an article of unusual consumption is a familiar item of almost every table menu.

Shipping, too, which looms into vision at mention of the sea, was never a greater force than it is today, forming as it does the means of transportation for carrying Canada's armies across the thousands of miles that intervene between them and the battlefields of Europe.

The Maritime Provinces in common with their sister provinces are also interested in the products of the land, and the judging of fruit and vegetables and the work of the dairy as illustrated in today's program.

The dog show and the hundreds of stalls where the cattle and horses are housed are all filled with interest. The great pageant before the grand stand is a perpetual delight to the thousands who view it from the grand stand.

BIG WINNERS' LIST

AT HORSE EXHIBIT

Clydesdales, Shires and Thoroughbreds Come Up for Decision of Judges.

STANDARD IS HIGH

Number and Excellence of Entries Make Placing of Awards Difficult.

It was Clydesdale Shire, heavy-draught and thoroughbred in the live stock arena yesterday. There were many entries, and the only pity was that the prizes were not sufficiently numerous to cover them all.

The judging began at two o'clock in the afternoon, and so numerous were the competitors that it was not until nearly five o'clock that the judges concluded the day's work. The following are the winners in their respective classes:

Clydesdales.
