POPULAR FEELING AGAINST FURTHER ARMS CONFERENCE

Navy Officials Believe That France and Italy Also Oppose Limitation.

INTEREST IS INTENSE
All Eyes are on the United States for Next Move in Matter.

(British United Press.)
Kobe, Dec. 4.—Japan has come out flatly in opposition to limitation of auxiliary vessels of war, no matter what conference may propose it.
"Japan resisted the proposal limiting auxiliary vessels at the Washington conference three years ago, and is determined to oppose any similar proposal at any future conference, because her geographical and strategic condition will not allow it," officials of the Japanese navy office said today.

The Osaka Mainichi broadcast their statement throughout the islands, and there is intense public interest in the announcement, as well as in what may be the next step of the United States.

Agree to Limited Number.
Navy officials said the only proposal concerning limitation of auxiliary craft they could entertain would be one fixing a minimum number for each nation.

"They do not believe that the United States will propose a naval arms limitation conference aimed at auxiliary craft because it is the opinion in Japan that such a movement would threaten to disturb the peace of the Pacific."

A United Press correspondent touring in the west of Japan to observe the sentiment of the people on this subject learned that the Japanese navy had been considered a move to strengthen Great Britain and the United States at the expense of Japan.

Will Hold Out to End.
The Japanese believe that England and America soon will discuss their naval strength and the matter of auxiliary craft. It is believed by those, for whom a bog of an Anglo-Saxon offensive has been raised, that France and Italy as well as Japan must hold out to the end against any effort to limit their auxiliary vessels.

"The imperialistic tendencies of Great Britain and the United States imperil the safety of France, Italy and Japan, therefore the need for auxiliary craft is going to be felt keenly by the oppressed," is the way the matter has been laid before the people. "There is undoubtedly public as well as official sentiment against any limitation of armaments conference."

SAYS CANADA IS ON EVE OF ADVANCE

Victor Ross, Home From England, Sees Prosperity Here Coming.

New York, Dec. 4.—Victor Ross, vice-president of the International Petroleum Co., and a director of Imperial Oil, Ltd., of Canada, has reached New York after an extended European trip. In an interview, in which he discussed his observations abroad, he said:

"The defeat of the Labor party in Britain did not mean the failure of the party of politics who were trying their hand at statecraft for the first time. The Labor Government, although it constantly sought sympathy because of its inexperience, included some of the most astute political strategists in British public life. Its administration was accorded more than a fair chance until it threatened to become a Communist party. The amount of actual work performed, per day per capita, is probably a good deal greater in the rank and file of the party which governs Britain today, than in that of the party, despite its Labor label, that was defeated."

"The result of the elections, both in Great Britain and the United States, has proved an effective stimulus to business on the other side and the complete recovery of the pound is in sight. What may, to some extent, retard the trade expansion in Great Britain is the substantial advance in commodity prices, particularly in foodstuffs and textiles. A higher level of prices for commodities will materially increase the difficulties of financing trade activity."

"The successful flotation of the Canadian loan in London, and the fact that the pound is materially improved, and the purchasing power of the Canadian dollar is increased, are encouraging this movement, is generally regarded as one of the most efficient of all the national agencies in London. This new emigration will be of the greatest service to the country and will assist materially in the era of prosperity which is surely coming in Canada. That country's history is closely duplicating the early development of the United States, where progress was made, not in a sustained and continued growth, but in a series of rapid advances and sharp setbacks. Canada is now on the eve of another advance."

Advanced Legislation to Be Demanded.
"Neither the Conservative Government of Great Britain nor the Republican Administration of the United States can accept their victories complacently, while the voters dislike novelties, like Progressive and Labor parties, in the next election these parties will be no longer novelties. People will expect from both governments advanced legislation, which will be for the benefit of the people at large; in fact, the people will expect these governments to do better the things which the new parties promised to do."

Asked as to the markets, Mr. Ross said that securities were obviously discounted in simple English that the court of domestic relations here force her husband to contribute $15 weekly to the support of herself and their two children.

"I won't live with him," she declared.

"He's coming," he is trying to effect a reconciliation with his wife, has been ordered to pay the $15. Mrs. McAlley is a Turkish woman.

In 8 Languages Asks For Support

Chicago, Dec. 4.—(United Press.)—Mrs. Paul McAlley, who can talk to her husband in eight different languages, including the Scandinavian, has asked in simple English that the court of domestic relations here force her husband to contribute $15 weekly to the support of herself and their two children.

"I won't live with him," she declared.

Moose and Deer Plentiful This Season

The photographs reproduced above were taken by a party of Montreal sportsmen who entered the Deer River Valley section of the wilderness, north of St. Paul, in the search of big game. As will be seen they met with some measure of success, the moose and deer being plentiful this season. The pictures show a kill hanging in the "barber," packed on a "limp" for transport to the river, and the rest.

Not the easiest or least exciting game of moose hunting is getting the prized trophy out of the woods after it has been secured. A thousand pounds or so limp moose takes some handling at any time, but constitutes a real problem in the heart of the woods, remote from the conveniences of civilization.
A little more on the ground is invaluable. A team of horses and a jumper in the possession of some woodsman or pioneer farmer are suddenly at a premium. Convenient river transportation is of all things the most to be desired. A few miles transport through the tangled heart of the primordial constitutes a half day's laborious work, as the team tardily smokes its way between trees and through underbrush and in places the axe must clear a way where progress is positively barred. The most difficult stage of the journey has been accomplished when the giant carcass reposes upon the river bank.
Transport down a tranquil river is not only easy but enjoyable. A moose carcass will float and can be readily towed behind a canoe. This process makes for somewhat tardy journeying, but compels a leisurely browsing on natural beauty that might otherwise be skimmed.
A hunter will agree as he eats his steaks with all modern appointments and the exquisite memory of a Canadian forest in autumn.

MORE HEBRIDEANS EXPECTED SOON

C. P. R. Announces Plans Following Success of Previous Parties.

The success of the movement to transplant the starving inhabitants of the Hebrides to Canada under a plan of farm training and settlement instituted by Father R. A. McDonnell and Bishop Fallon of London, Ontario, is announced by the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has been instrumental in carrying out the transportation. An announcement from the railroad says: "With the last party of the Hebrideans to come out to Canada in the summer of 1924 was a delegation from the ragged Scottish islands headed by Canon Alex. MacDonnell, Dean of the Outer Isles, and four other influential authorities, which visited Canada for the purpose of investigating conditions with a view to promoting immigration on a much larger scale. The delegates spent ten days in the Maritimes and a week each in Ontario and Quebec. The remainder of their journey was spent in the Western Provinces. In Alberta they were able to judge accurately of the success of the Hebrideans already engaged in Canadian farming."

"They were impressed with the possibilities of success for future emigrants as evidenced by the progress made by those already in the country. Upon Canon Alex. MacDonnell, Canon MacDonnell said: 'We will have a good report to present when we reach the Hebrides.'"

"Following upon the movement, which has been gathering impetus for three years, this will undoubtedly stimulate the exodus from the Hebrides next spring, and, in fact, plans have been laid to this end. Ontario and Alberta have been the only provinces to benefit to any extent from this valuable new addition. The thoroughness with which the Maritimes were investigated, and their suitability in certain respects for Hebridean settlements, lends confidence to the belief that many of the emigrants from the Scottish islands will settle there."

"British Columbia has been active in arranging for the settlement of Hebrideans on Vancouver Island. It is also planned to place the newcomers on the small islands off the coast, where they may follow their traditional pursuits of farming and fishing and be securely aware of their change of location."

Bear Kills Trapper And Avenge Mate

Port Arthur, Dec. 4.—A trapper from English River, says that he believes that a bear which a few days ago killed and partly consumed Anti Wainio, trapper, was mad with the thirst for vengeance and killed the trapper to avenge the shooting of his mate. Five weeks before his death Wainio shot a big female bear. This trapper says that it was a well-known fact that two large bears had often been seen together, and that for five weeks the male bear had stalked Wainio before finally killing and half eating him, and was even seen around Wainio's cabin.

The word "bachelor" is derived from an old word meaning "cowardly"—a term that can be applied to men who had not yet reached the full dignity of manly responsibility.

Text Was In Cross Word Puzzle

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 4.—Cross word puzzle fans flocked to the Knoxvill Baptist church in Orchard Place, where Rev. George F. McElwain, pastor, before launching into his sermon, let his congregation solve one of the familiar space squares, which concealed the words of his text.

The puzzle, containing 144 spaces, was laid out on a large blackboard placed in the front of the sanctuary. Printed copies of the definitions were distributed among the pews, and the congregation was invited to fill in the spaces. Fifteen minutes was allotted for solution, and as many experts had been attracted by announcement of the novel feature, all the needed 85 words were called out from the pews within the time set.

It then was pointed out that the completed puzzle contained the words from Proverbs 1, 10, which the minister used for his theme for his sermon. "My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

"KID" MCCOY TO FACE CHARGE OF KILLING WOMAN

Fallen Idol of Ring Says That Mrs. Mors Committed Suicide.

INSANITY DEFENCE
Will Soon Engage in a Fight for His Life in the Courts.

By HAROLD E. SWISHER.
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
Los Angeles, Dec. 4.—(United Press.)—Kid McCoy, the fallen idol of the prize ring of two decades ago, is scheduled to step before the California court on Monday, Dec. 8, to face the charge of murdering Mrs. Teresa Mors, his ninth and possibly his last love.

His second wife, Mrs. Mors, was shot in the heart by McCoy in the rooming house of his last wife, Mrs. Mors, in the city of Los Angeles. McCoy's defense attorneys, who are now in the city, are preparing to plead insanity.

SUE PHONE CO. FOR FIRE DELAY

Orange, N. J., Residents Ask $41,000 for Hold-up in Call.

New York, Dec. 4.—Two residents of Orange, N. J., have filed suits for $41,000 against the New York Telephone Company in the Common Pleas Court at Newark, because of an alleged delay of seventeen minutes in getting a telephone operator to answer a fire call on the morning of April 6.

Michael J. Codel, owner of a garage, is suing for $25,000, and James J. McGrath, lessee, for $16,000. The telephone company is charged with failure to supply service under the terms of a contract with the subscriber and with failure to give service under its common-law duty.

Codel, in his complaint, says that a fire broke out in his garage at 4:40 a.m. and reported it to him at once. For seventeen minutes, Codel says, he was unable to get an operator to answer the telephone. During this time, he says, his calls of fire awoke other residents in the neighborhood, and they joined in an effort to raise the operator, but could not get a response. The engines, Codel says, arrived a few minutes after the operator answered, but it was then too late to save the garage.

MacDonald Again Is Labor Party Leader

BANKERS AT CAPITAL

you," said his attorneys and the defense attorneys. "A clever ruse, but a bit too late," was District Attorney Keyes' comment.

Brain Storm Passed.
The brain storm soon passed, and in the days that followed McCoy has had much time to ponder. Among other things he has doubtless become aware of the fickleness of friendship.

The state has reconstructed McCoy's pathway through the fateful night of the killing, and a wild crowd it was. From the apartment where he and Mrs. Mors had lived for several weeks, out into the night with blood stains on his clothing and the smell of liquor on his lips.

Behind him, he has admitted, he left the "only woman I ever loved," cold in death, lying on a couch, a scarf thrown loosely across her body, and with a bloodstained pillow of McCoy pressed to her breast, placed there by the man himself in some grim tribute to their devotion.

Then downtown to a cafe, to his sister's residence 15 miles away in a little suburb, to the bedside of his aged mother, and then to several places in search of Albert Mors, divorced husband of the woman who had loved completely and not wisely.

On through the early dawn, driving recklessly about the city in quest of something perhaps he knew not what, McCoy went, not daring to return to the apartment where the woman of his latest seduction lay dead.

Then into the fashionable antique shop shortly after it opened. The shooting there, the pursuit—and jail. With the fog of liquor cleared from his brain, the "Kid" soon gained control of himself, until the morning a death sentence was pronounced.

So now he is in trouble—when he's gone astray. That's the time that real friendship goes out of its way. To help him and cheer him and bid him be square.

And know stormy weather will sometime be fair. And the fault may be his and the anger be hot. But the duty is ours. If we help him or not. So now he is in trouble—when he's gone astray. That's the time that real friendship goes out of its way.

Here's a fellow in trouble—that's the reason enough.

QUEBEC SEEKS LOWER IMPORT DUTY ON LIQUOR

Asks for Federal Govt. Action to Counteract Bootleggers' Price Cut.

SASKATCHEWAN ACT

Quart of Liquor, Two Gallons Wine, Four of Beer Daily.

(Canadian Press.)
Quebec, Dec. 3.—Among matters to be discussed at the first favorable opportunity by representatives of the Government of Quebec and the Federal Government will be the question of reducing the import duty on liquor so as to counteract bootlegging and the smuggling in of liquor, which is so profitable now through the high duties that are charged.

It is pointed out that should the rate of duty on liquor that legally enters the province be lowered the Quebec liquor commission and other similar bodies operating throughout the Dominion would be able to sell their products at lower prices and thus compete with the bootleggers' duty free contraband cargo.

The question of the reduction of duty on liquor, however, directly affects the federal revenue branch, and it is not thought possible that this subject will be settled without considerable discussion.

The matter of the suggested conference will in all probability come up some time in January, both in the House of Commons at Ottawa and the Legislative Assembly at Quebec next session.

Saskatchewan Selling Plan.
Regina, Sask., Dec. 3.—No provision for the sale of beer in licensed premises is made in a bill of the Government of liquor introduced in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. J. A. Cross, Attorney General, Provision is made, however, for the establishment of stores where purchases may be made not exceeding one quart of spirituous liquors, two gallons of wine and four gallons of beer daily. The new bill, the result of a plebiscite last summer which gave a large majority against the Saskatchewan Temperance Act, will be given its second reading on Friday. Yesterday its first reading there was no debate. Provisions are made for local option in cities and districts.

The Main Items.
An official summary of the bill sets out the following as its main clauses: "The business is to be managed by a board of not more than three members as the Government decides. No provision is made for the sale of beer on licensed premises."

General liquor stores may be established by the board in any city or town of seven cities and the town of Yorkton. The rest of the province is divided into districts in which the board may establish stores for the sale of beer only.

The board shall not establish beer stores in any district other than the cities and the Town of Yorkton without first giving 30 days notice of their intention.

People of the districts may petition against establishment, in which case the board shall not proceed to establish until a vote of the people has been taken to find out if it was the desire to vote establishment of stores in this district.

The people of the city districts have the right to vote out stores at any time after establishment and people of other districts have the right to vote out their stores in this district after the expiration of two years from establishment.

All liquor is to be sold in sealed packages and for cash only. No liquor is to be sold to persons under 21 years of age.

SWORD OF NAPOLEON RETURNS TO FAMILY

Paris, Dec. 3.—After litigation lasting half a century, Napoleon's sword has been adjudged the property of Prince Victor Napoleon Bonaparte, the present head of the family, and it will be sent to him from the Louvre, where it has been on exhibition since 1871. The courts were first called on to deal with the case when the Empress Eugenie, widow of Napoleon III, claimed many objects taken from the imperial residences as having belonged to the nation.

Empress Eugenie was unable to make good here claim as the documents on which it was based were supposed to have been lost in the burning of the Tuilleries during the Paris commune. She kept up legal action until she died. Prince Victor greatly reduced his claims to relics of his illustrious ancestor and the French government decided to restore to the Bonaparte family several works of art now in the national museum. The sword is one. It was manufactured for the great Emperor in the arms factory at Versailles from designs of Boudier.
