ANOTHER SITE FOR THE ORPHANS' HOME

Application for Parcel of City Land in Lancaster Dropped

No Exemption of Chautauque License Fees—More Applications for Labor Bureau Post—Sisters of the Good Shepherd Write re Rebecca Street.

The application of the New Brunswick Orphan Home for a deed to a parcel of land in Lancaster owned by the city has been withdrawn, according to an announcement made by Mayor McLellan and a committee meeting of the common council this morning. It is understood that the directors are negotiating for another site on the side of the Manawagonish road opposite to that owned by the city. Commissioner Bullock explained, and expected to get the deed without any restrictions as proposed by the city parcel.

The mayor presided and all the commissioners were present. Mayor McLellan asked Commissioner Thompson to instruct the police to put a stop to promiscuous automobile driving around King Square while tonight's hand concert was in progress. He said he had received many complaints regarding this matter and it was said that the honking of horns at times made it impossible to hear the concert. Commissioner Thompson said he would look after the matter.

A letter from the Russian Relief Administration enclosing food requisition application blanks to be used in connection with aid to a family in Russia, one member of which was living in West St. John, was ordered received.

A further application from Julia T. Pirie on behalf of the Chautauque, asking for exemption from the city license fees of $10 a day was read, but on motion of Commissioner Thompson it was decided to reply that the city by-laws required that the fee be collected and the city could do nothing but comply.

In reply to a wire sent to the parcel Grammer school papers, the largest for that class in any year. An usual case of the candidates was written up a portion of the papers this year. One candidate will write for superior license, 157 for class I, and 378 for class II.

The largest number of candidates will write in Fredericton with R. B. Wallace as supervisor. They will be classified as follows: Grammar school, twenty-two; Class I, 135; Class II, 170—a total of 327. In St. John thirty-nine will write the papers—Grammar school, fifteen; Superior, one; Class I, eight; Class II, five. In Chatham ten will write papers—Grammar school, three; Class I, four; Class II, three.

Undergraduates and graduates of the University of New Brunswick will comprise the majority of the Grammar school candidates writing papers in Fredericton. The examinations will terminate on Friday.

Three Stations, of Which St. John is One—Applicants in Province Number 376. (Special to Times.) Fredericton, N. B., June 12.—The department of education of the education department of New Brunswick will begin on Tuesday morning in Fredericton, St. John and Chatham. The candidates number 376, which is larger than it has been for years and approaches the record of 400 in 1919.

For amateur communication of the U. S. government prescribes a transmitting wave length not to exceed 200 meters; the present highly developed "broadcasting" is performed on a wavelength of 200 meters. Commercial stations operate on standard wavelengths of 200 and 400 meters, or on wavelengths in excess of 1,600 meters. For example, the powerful transatlantic station at Rocky Point, Long Island (N. Y.), uses a wavelength of approximately 16,500 meters and the familiar line signals sent out by the government naval station at Arlington (Radio, Va.) are radiated at a wavelength of 2,500 meters.

FIFTEEN MINUTES OF RADIO EACH DAY

By Edward N. Davis Formerly Technical Electrical Expert For U. S. Government

Lesson 24. THE ELECTRIC WAVE. Electromagnetic waves travel with the speed of light, at a velocity of 186,000 miles per second, or 300,000,000 meters per second. If the velocity of the electric wave (300,000,000 meters per second) is divided by the number of cycles of current in the open circuit or, in other words, the frequency of the oscillations, the length of a single wave may be obtained by dividing the velocity of the electric waves by the frequency of the oscillations. For example, if the frequency of the oscillations is 1,500,000 cycles per second, the length of a single wave will be 300,000,000 divided by 1,500,000 or 200 meters. Inversely, if the wave length is known, the frequency of the oscillations may be obtained by dividing the velocity of the wave by the wave length.

The train of oscillation set up by a spark discharge in a radio transmitter is shown in the following diagram:

The oscillations are known as "damped" oscillations due to the fact that the amplitude decreases at each successive oscillation because of energy losses in the circuit. For example, the amplitude (A) is less than amplitude (B), and so on. If a train of waves is radiated in which the amplitudes decrease rapidly, interference with other radio stations will result. The United States government prescribes a certain definite ratio between the successive amplitudes of the oscillations. The logarithm of this ratio is known as the "damping coefficient" and must be greater than 2 for each complete cycle. Without explaining the mathematical development of this figure, it may be stated that the minimum number of 28 complete oscillations must be established in the open or antenna circuit, by a spark discharge in the closed circuit, in order to conform to the U. S. regulations.

The length of a wave may be expressed as the distance between the points of two successive waves when the energy is at a maximum or a minimum. For example, in the diagram above, the length of a single wave is the distance between points (A) and (C), or between points (1) and (3). In radio practice wave length is expressed in meters.

For amateur communication of the U. S. government prescribes a transmitting wave length not to exceed 200 meters; the present highly developed "broadcasting" is performed on a wavelength of 200 meters. Commercial stations operate on standard wavelengths of 200 and 400 meters, or on wavelengths in excess of 1,600 meters. For example, the powerful transatlantic station at Rocky Point, Long Island (N. 50 DEAD IN STORM THAT SWEEP OVER NEW YORK STATE

Flood conditions prevail through the Mohawk and Hudson valleys and railroad traffic on small branch lines was crippled at an early hour this morning.

Syracuse, Oneida, and other Mohawk Valley towns, received the most severe storms and the property damage there was the heaviest. In Syracuse, it is estimated, fully a million dollars damage was done in the business and residential sections, which were covered with from six inches to a foot of water. A New York Central passenger train was marooned in the lowlands near Syracuse, at the height of the storm and the cars flooded. Passengers were rescued by firemen.

A wind of nearly cyclonic proportions did heavily damage to towns in the Hudson Valley just south of Albany. Here the weight of the storm hit Hudson and Athens, tearing roofs off houses, destroying crops, demolishing an icehouse and leveling telegraph and telephone lines. Virtually the entire fruit crop in this section, one of the richest in fruit trees in the state, was destroyed.

This morning the Hudson had risen three feet at Albany, and was still rising as the water sheds north and west drained into it.

Traffic officials of the New York Central said that trains had not yet resumed their regular schedules on the main line running through the storm belt, and that branch lines would not be back to normal for at least 24 hours.

The New York, Ontario and Western railroad near Oneida was the hardest hit of the branch lines, the tracks being washed away in five places, marooning a repair train that had been sent out and a milk train.

Oneida was practically under water last night with police patrolling streets in rowboats to meet any other sudden rise of the water.

Syracuse an aged woman was drowned when her home was swept away in the flood. Her body was found in the wreckage of the house, which lodged against a bridge.

Property damage at Syracuse was estimated at $1,000,000. The residential and business sections were from six inches to a foot under water, and the tunnel under the Erie Canal, through which the New York Central trains pass, was flooded. At Oneida an entire section of the city was a lake, small outbuildings and wooden garages were washed away, streets were ruined, and the tracks of the New York, Ontario and Western Railway cut in several places near the city. The telephone and telegraph lines were not seriously affected.

Boston, June 12.—Severe electrical storm, accompanied by hail, a torrent of rain and high winds, swept this city and its suburbs yesterday, causing much property damage in the gardening sections, smashing windows in green houses, dwellings and trolley cars. For an hour it was almost as dark as night, and the damage was caused by unusually large hail stones.

But a few minutes of the storm, today, of the damage wrought by the tempest which swept Greater Boston and other points in New England yesterday indicated that the property damage might amount to one million dollars. H. H. Spaulding of Brockton, was killed at Scituate, by a falling tree. Injuries numbered several.

IN WALL STREET. New York, June 12.—(10:30)—Selling of the general list was actively resumed at the heavy opening of today's stock market. Incidents over the week-end, including the failure of the German loan negotiations in Paris gave further courage to the short interest. Studebaker, U. S. Steel, Baldwin, Mexican Petroleum and several of the speculative rails were the only exceptions to the further reaction. C. P. R., St. Paul, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Kruger, Sears Roebuck, Republic Iron and Steel, Anaconda Copper, Industrial Alcohol, Westinghouse and American Hide and Leather Pkg. were lower by fractions to one point. All foreign exchanges were unsettled, the British rate reaching 1 1/2 cents from last week's final quotations. French, Belgian and German bills continued to weaken.

They'd Met. Church was over the congregation filed slowly out and gathered in little chattering groups in the churchyard. Presently the vicar came up and joined a select party. He introduced an old sea captain to the leading light of the village, a wealthy Mr. Smith. "You must have seen each other in church today," said the beaming vicar, and then he said to the old sea captain, "I was sleeping in the next bunk to me."

CROP PROSPECTS IN PROVINCE ARE DECLARED GOOD. (Special to Times.) Fredericton, N. B., June 12.—The four days rain which has fallen practically all over the province is expected to give crops of all kinds a great start. It is warmly welcomed in the greater part of the agricultural sections as expected to be excellent. Seeding had been practically completed in the greater part of the province before the rain began. Grass in all sections is expected to be exceptionally good, according to reports to the department of agriculture.

Applies give promise of a good crop but conditions later in the season will have a determining influence. The season was heavier than it was this year. He will prosecute game cases at both Campbellton and Kedgwick.

SACK TOMBS IN SEARCH FOR GEMS

Churches Desecrated; Vaults of Emperors Torn Open

Caskets Taken Away—Body of Peter the Great Alone Escaped Vandal Hands—Jewellery Torn from Czarina's Corpse.

(Special Cable to the N. Y. Times and Montreal Gazette.) Paris, June 8.—News from Russia of the sack of churches and the arrest of the clergy is followed today by dispatches reporting the violation of the tombs of all Russian saints and rulers by Bolsheviks in their frantic search for treasures with which to keep up their rotting regime.

Details of the ghastly work ordered by the Soviet are printed today by the Journal and the Liberté, and verified by Russian residents in Paris who have recently escaped from the toils of the Bolsheviks.

The work of desecration was carried on with fissionable glee by the Bolsheviks as if the bloodiest against the ruling class which already has claimed a million lives could not be satisfied until the bodies of the dead were insulted and maltreated.

Only the body of that greatest Russian king, Peter the Great, survived the work of vandalism in St. Peter and Paul's Cathedral, Petrograd. The stern countenance of the great ruler, the death as in life caused the ghouls to hesitate in their orgy. The bloodthirsty Bolsheviks did not touch the body of the dead emperor, but they did tear the jewels from the body of the empress.

The sarcophagus of Catherine the Great was broken open and the jewels and rings torn from the body of the empress.

After despoiling the body of the Empress Anna Ivanovna the massive silver coffin was dragged from the church and shipped to Moscow to be melted.

Czar's Tombs Pillaged. The tombs of the Alexandra and Nicholas, were alike systematically attacked, the bodies thrown out, robbed of ornaments and the coffins stripped of metals. The body, but not the tomb of Alexandra I, escaped the list of the attackers. Her tomb was found empty. This seemed to explain the myth that in his late years he retired under the name of Ivan Kountitch to Siberia monastery where he died.

According to the Liberté correspondent the desecration of the tombs of the saints was ordered by Lenin in an effort to increase his power by playing on the superstitions of the ignorant.
